U. S. SPEEDS CURRENCY EXPANSION; BARS NATIONAL SCRIP, NOT LOCAL

Today

Just Like Sunday.
Good Resolutions.
Why Do We All Worry?
For Middle-Aged Women.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, March 8.

WHEN MONEY does not circulate, men, automobiles and goods do not circulate. In many American cities this day seems like Sunday. Everything is quiet, everybody anxiously asking somebody else some question.

Meanwhile, the President, Mr. Woodin, Secretary of the Treasury, and other wise ones are straightening out the tangle. You are told it will soon be possible to draw out one-third of what you have in the bank. A third of a loaf is better than no bread.

MANY AMERICANS are now making solemn, soulful resolutions.

"If I ever get it again, I shall know enough to keep it."

"Nobody will ever persuade me to run risks when I have all I really need. Somebody else can have the imaginary profits."

But these resolutions will all melt as others have melted when the national sun shines once more, prices go up, business revives, dividends reappear, good wages come back.

When the devil is sick he decides to become a monk, according to the old saying. He has been sick often, but he has never really become a monk.

ONE THING that Americans should ask themselves is this:

Why do we organize our lives on a basis of permanent worry?

In other countries—England, Germany, France, Italy—men map out a budget of life as well as a financial budget.

They plan to work, hard, for a certain length of time, then enjoy peace, the real life that comes with freedom from anxiety.

In this country the farther we go into old age the more we plan, the more we reach out, and the more we worry.

When you see an old man's funeral in America you may say to yourself:

"There goes one who has only just stopped worrying."

THE TREASURY decides that owners of safe deposit boxes may have access to them. That is a wise decision. Why a man should have less right to open his safe deposit box than to open his pocketbook is not plain.

Also, if safe deposit boxes were kept closed or tampered with now by government agencies, that have closed or tampered with everything else, that would be the end of the safe deposit box business.

It would be equivalent to telling Americans:

"If you want your money where you can get it, put your money under the mattress. It won't be safe in a safe deposit box."

It should be remembered, even now, that a man's money belongs to HIM, not to the government.

SOME FOOLISH middle-aged women should be warned by a suit that a 28-year-old "very handsome taxi dancer" has brought against a woman of 53. The woman, a wealthy widow, was so silly and unfortunate as to believe what the young man told her. She wept with shame when her letters to him were read in court.

The young "gentleman" sues her for $100,000 for not keeping her promise to marry him. It is strange that any court should be compelled to listen to such an outrageous case. The Judge might well terminate the proceedings by saying to the young man:

"Six months in jail will teach you not to make a fool of a woman old enough to be your mother."

KING GEORGE is recovering from a cold. Perhaps with all this excitement you didn't know he had one, but he did, and several doctors tell you he is getting better.

Other European news reports that Austria and Germany are again talking of getting together. France vetoed that some time ago, but vetoes have become less important since the League of Nations vetoed Japan's trip to China and Japan went cheerfully ahead.

MR. HITLER, who was to go to Geneva to discuss disarmament with the League of Nations, says he will not go unless Mussolini also goes in person.

Mr. Hitler apparently believes that dictators should get together. That is the difference between Hitler and Mussolini. If Mussolini wanted to go anywhere he would go, not caring who else went or stayed. He would say, with Dante:

"If I go, who remains? If I stay, who is there to go."

CRESCENT CITY, Cal., goes back to the very early days for "money." Citizens give each other clam shells, marked 10 or 25 cents, signed by the individual who puts the shells in circulation.

Those worrying about the quality of scrip or clearing house certificate money are wasting their worry.

Such money is as good as any you ever had, if it is not counterfeit, and the same may be said of all money.

New money that you will get from your bank or employer will be as good as the money to which you have been accustomed.

Dry Agents to Center Activities Against Making, Carrying

WASHINGTON, March 8.—(AP.)—Henceforth the Federal government will concentrate "almost entirely" on liquor manufacturers and transporters to enforce prohibition, leaving speakeasy prosecutions to the states.

As announced today by Amos W. W. Woodcock, enforcement director, the new plan puts into immediate effect the restrictions laid down by Congress to apply after July 1. This means no more wire-tapping or purchase of liquor as evidence for consumption by agents.

Woodcock placed the decision on the grounds of economy, necessitated by the huge cuts in enforcement funds made by the last Congress. The orders were dated March 3, the day before the Roosevelt administration took office.

ATTACK SOURCE

How the new setup will affect states having no local enforcement acts remains to be seen. Woodcock said complaints against speakeasies hereafter would be referred to local authorities, in the main, and predicted much more attacks on the sources of supply as a result.

In his statement, he referred to these two provisos of the new law:

"That no part of this appropriation shall be used for or in connection with 'wire tapping' to procure evidence of violations of the national prohibi-

Snow Flurries Here Herald Cold Spell

Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania may get whipped by the tail of a cold wave tomorrow and Friday, but the severe weather which shot the mercury down 40 degrees in the Northwest probably will be considerably tempered here, W. S. Brotzman said today.

Snow started this morning and Brotzman predicted additional flurries tonight and tomorrow, with the lowest temperature tonight 25 to 30 degrees. The temperature will gradually drop during the day and tomorrow night, with the possibility of lower than 20 degrees by Friday.

Pomerene and Miller Quit Post in R. F. C.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—(INS.)—Two important posts on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation board were vacant today, following the departure of Charles A. Miller, of New York, and Atlee Pomerene, of Cleveland. Miller was president of the corporation, and Pomerene, chairman. Both were recess appointees, and neither had been confirmed by the Senate. They held their appointments expired with the 72nd Congress.

2 WOMEN KILLED BY HIT-RUN CAR

Two women, fatally injured by a hit-run driver, were found unconscious on the Russellton road, near Cheswick, early today, by a motorist whose headlights revealed the prostrate forms.

One of the victims, Mrs. Emma Reader, 33, a widow of Cheswick, died several hours after being taken to Citizens General Hospital, New Kensington. The other, Mrs. Fred Fisher, 46, of Acmetonia, died at noon. Both had suffered fractured skulls and other injuries.

Clarence Noel, of Acmetonia, who discovered the women, informed county detectives the two apparently had been struck last night while walking along the road and had been lying in the highway for hours.

Chairman May Quit; Governor Demands Further Inquiry

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, March 8.—Dr. Clyde L. King may resign shortly as chairman of the Public Service Commission.

This is foreseen as one of the upshots of yesterday's dramatic meeting of the Senate Utilities Committee when O. K. Eaton of Pittsburgh, committee counsel, resigned in protest against an effort of Senator John J. McClure, chairman of the committee, to compel him to testify in substantiation of King's declaration that he knew of no corruption touching either utilities or members of the Public Service Commission, and to vouch for the committee's energy in pushing the utility investigation.

There was no comment today from Gov. Pinchot's office on the expressed belief of Attorney Eaton that King should resign from office if anything is to be accomplished by the investigation.

PINCHOT TO PUSH QUIZ

The Governor wants the utility investigation to continue. He declared today:

"Of course, the investigation ought to continue.

"The utilities which have things to hide want it stopped. The people want it to go on.

"I shall do my level best to see that the will of the people is carried out."

The resignation of Dr. King would be promptly accepted by Gov. Pinchot, and would not be unwelcome. Relations between the Executive and the man with whom he has been associated for years have reached the breaking point.

If the Governor could under the law he probably would immediately withdraw the nomination of King as a member of the Public Service Commission.

Hot words passed between the Governor and King prior to the

U. S. NOW Guarantees Some Bank Deposits, Says W. R. Hearst

THERE IS a widespread demand to have bank deposits guaranteed by the government. The people have to a degree lost confidence in the banks.

Some banks are undoubtedly strong and equal to all emergencies.

Some banks are weak, some have already collapsed.

The difficulty in the minds of the people is the means of knowing which banks are strong and which are weak.

As a consequence of their indefinite knowledge on this subject the people have been disposed to take no further chances, and to withdraw deposits from all banks, the strong as well as the weak.

This is extremely damaging to the banking situation and equally damaging to the general business situation.

The present panic may be called a people's panic. It is largely brought about by themselves.

It is largely due to the people's withdrawing funds from legitimate banking institutions and hoarding those funds in their own strong-boxes, or in what corresponds to a strong-box, if it be only a stocking under the mattress.

THERE IS no question of the harmfulness of this practice.

It is dangerous to the possessors of these home funds, making them liable to robbery and attack, and it is absolutely destructive to business.

The result of it has been the inevitable closing of banks and the absence of the necessary money to conduct business and to pay salaries and to provide employment and to maintain the self-supporting occupations of the nation.

However, it is useless to declaim against hoarding.

The word panic means fear, and fear for the safety of their funds in the banks is what causes the withdrawal of these funds, and no one can say that there has not been some justification of that fear.

How can that fear be allayed?

NOT BY advice or exhortation, but by some definite condition, which will re-establish confidence.

The public still has confidence in its government and with every justification for such confidence.

The government of the United States has the greatest credit of any government on the face of the earth.

The people are anxious to be protected in their possessions by the credit of the government which is THEIR government—by credit which is really THEIR combined credit.

It is possible that this step will eventually be arrived at.

Government which regulates the activities of banks and inspects and supervises those activities should doubtless morally accept responsibility for the completeness and conscientiousness of such regulation and inspection, by guaranteeing the safety of the funds of those depositors who repose confidence in the effectiveness of the government's supervision.

Eventually, therefore, federal government guarantee of deposits in federal banks will occur as a natural consequence to and warrant of the effectiveness of government supervision.

AT THE PRESENT moment, however, the public should realize THERE ALREADY EXISTS GOVERNMENT GUARANTEE OF THE PEOPLE'S DEPOSITS in certain federal banks, namely the federal postal savings banks.

The government accepts these funds and de-

Government drops plan to sanction scrip on national basis in favor of expansion of present currency.

Treasury Undersecretary Ballantine explains that although national scrip is not sanctioned "in communities where it is necessary scrip may be issued by the clearing house associations or banks without interference from the federal government." Permission for such issues must be obtained from the Treasury.

Gov. Lehman, New York, sets up state scrip board, Alfred E. Smith, chairman.

Gov. Ritchie says Maryland will follow New York, indicates Maryland will issue scrip.

Secretary Woodin says: "We see the light. This thing is not going to pieces."

President Roosevelt plans to ask Congress for broad powers to cope with the fast-changing situation. Congressional leaders say they believe a program can be speeded through in three days.

Foodstuffs move more rapidly. Pork prices increase, other commodities up slightly.

Plans Here Upset by Changes

Pittsburgh bankers were meeting this afternoon to decide what to do about scrip.

Early plans to issue it by Friday apparently had been halted by a statement from Secretary of the Treasury Woodin that scrip was banned. Later elaboration and clarification by his aides, Woodin made clear that only a national issue is barred, that local issues can be put out with Woodin's permission, "where necessary."

After the confusion, bankers here were slow, however, to predict which way they will swing.

Advised of the change in Woodin's regulations, F. F. Brooks, president of the First National bank and vice-president of the Clearing House Association, said:

"My goodness—every 15 minutes we have to make a new decision. We're going to have a meeting of the Clearing House this afternoon and I'm not going to think until I get there."

GOING AHEAD'

J. C. Chaplin, president of Colonial Trust Company and a member of the scrip committee of the Clearing House, said:

"We're going ahead, regardless, so we'll be prepared. It's

Congress Ready to Meet

WASHINGTON, March 8.—(AP.)—Plans sped forward today for expansion of the nation's currency to obviate the general use of scrip during the national emergency, in which President Roosevelt will keep a firm hand upon the banking system.

At the White House, the Treasury and the Capitol, the chief executive and congressional and financial leaders worked at the remedies that will be employed to relieve the situation.

From these, word emerged this afternoon that the President would retain his control of the nation's banks until permanent legislation has been enacted; that this program would be expedited through the special session which meets tomorrow; and that no national plan for the use of scrip was contemplated, but that its use would not be forbidden in communities and sections where special conditions called for it to be employed.

NEED WOODIN PERMIT

Each locality using scrip would have to be permitted to do so by Secretary Woodin.

At the Treasury and White House, it was pointed out that under the regulations thus far issued, sections desiring to use scrip may obtain permission from Secretary Woodin to do so beginning Friday, if he considers the emergency conditions in that locality warrant.

Secretary Woodin said that actual currency would be circulated in place of scrip or clearing house certificates under a plan now being formulated.

He did not disclose the program under which currency would be

Mrs. Carter Leidy Dies In Car's River Plunge

NEW YORK, March 8.—(INS.)—In an attempt to avoid a collision with another car on a bridge in the Bronx river parkway, a sedan carrying Mr. and Mrs. Carter Randolph Leidy, of Rye, N. Y., plunged through the guard rail and fell into the river 30 feet below today.

Mrs. Marjorie Leidy, 30, former wife of Frederick W. Procter, heir to the Procter & Gamble soap millions, was drowned before rescuers could extricate her from the wreckage.

Her husband, 31, who was once married to "Fifi" Widener, of Philadelphia, was critically injured.

The sedan landed upside down in the muddy river bottom after its dizzy plungef rom the overpass. The river is five or six feet deep at that point and the wheels of the car could be seen above the surface.

Three employes of a gas station nearby, who saw the accident, plunged into the cold water without removing their clothing. They managed to drag Leidy out of the water.

He cried as they were rescuing him:

"Never mind me. Get my wife."

A police emergency crew, arriving a few minutes later, found the gas station employes still trying vainly to reach Mrs. Leidy. Policemen lowered a rope from the bridge and attempted to raise the automobile, but the rope broke.

Patrolman Russel Schoffland dived into the river and managed to pull Mrs. Leidy out. After an unsuccessful attempt to revive her with an inhalator an ambulance surgeon pronounced her dead.

U. S. SPEEDING EXPANSION OF CURRENCY IN EMERGENCY used, but made it clear that a formal plan for scrip or other medium of exchange issue was being abandoned.

There were no details as to the form of currency expansion that would be employed, but it was pointed out that under existing law Federal Reserve banks are permitted to issue currency backed by government securities.

President Roosevelt let it be known that he realizes additional currency is necessary as a result of hoarding and the banking holiday and that he was sidetracking the scrip plan for what he considers a sounder proposition.

RESERVE NOTES

He did not disclose what he had in mind, but it was believed to call for the use of additional Federal Reserve notes such as were authorized last night by the New York Federal Reserve Bank under the Glass Steagall act of a year ago.

Federal Reserve currency could be expanded $2,000,000,000, if the banks took full advantage of the Glass-Steagall law and have sufficient government bonds to put up as security above the 40 per cent gold requirement.

The law permits Federal Reserve banks to put up government securities to the face value of 60 per cent of the currency they issue, and requires that the other 40 per cent collateral be gold. The old law required a 40 per cent gold backing and a 60 per cent backing of eligible (commercial) paper.

Meanwhile, as the President's intention of maintaining a firm command of the banking situation by asking Congress, convened in special session tomorrow, for broad powers to carry on until permanent legislation is enacted, there was talk at the Capitol of guaranteeing bank deposits.

FAVORS GUARANTEE

In the House, Chairman Steagall, of the House Banking Committee, said he favored a "one hundred per cent guarantee of bank deposits for the sound" institutions and moderate inflation of the currency. He declared:

"We ought to guarantee the deposits in sound banks and ought to let the people know the weak banks."

The Alabama Democrat, who will handle President Roosevelt's banking legislation in the House, added:

"I am against any radical inflation, but if they want more currency, I favor that."

Steagall said that he had not yet been informed as to Mr. Roosevelt's program, but predicted that a law guaranteeing bank deposits would be enacted. He said:

"Telegrams are coming in from coast to coast in support of a guarantee bank deposit law."

The House in the last congress passed the Steagall guarantee bank deposit bill, but it died in the Senate.

Steagall said that he would not favor a "uniform banking system that would eliminate state banks."

Speaker-nominee Rainey said President Roosevelt's emergency legislation would be expedited in the House but that he doubted whether action would be taken tomorrow unless specifically requested by Mr. Roosevelt.

The Illinois Democrat said the session would continue only for a few days and that congress would recess until April unless unforeseen events would necessitate it remaining in session.

Gilbert M. Hitchcock, former Senator from Nebraska, called on President oRosevelt today to propose that an insurance fund be set up to take care of depositors in closed banks.

Hitchcock said that the proposal was advanced at the time the Federal Reserve system was established some 20 years ago and that it passed the Senate but did not get through the House.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, before going to the White House for a conference with the President on the banking situation, said he believed the emergency banking program could be put through in three days.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Robinson said the first day of the session beginning tomorrow would be devoted to receiving the President's message and organizing.

If the recommendations should be referred to committees, however, the Democratic chieftain thought the work might require a little more than three days.

The Democratic leader said he had conferred with House leaders and all was set to push through the emergency recommendations of the President.

The Senate Democrats have adopted a drastic caucus rule to enable them to get action quickly. Under it, two-thirds of the 58 Democrats will constitute a caucus and a majority of the caucus can bind the party to support an executive proposal.

President Roosevelt will issue another proclamation tomorrow night when the present four-day holiday ends, renewing his control over the American gold supply to protect it from hoarders and raiders.

balance the budget and assure the

REORGANIZATION PLAN

Mr. Roosevelt will put before Congress tomorrow the first part of the governmental reorganization plan by which he expects to balance the budget and assure the national credit.

Still cheerful and smiling, the President talked over his plans and views today in his first interview with newspapermen, but not for quotations.

His ideas for the future were guardedly revealed in the free exchange of questions and answers.

Continuation of the broad wartime powers is believed necessary by Mr. Roosevelt because of the fast changing events that have resulted from the closing of the banking institutions. He wants to make sure of the situation before laying before Congress a permanent plan of banking reorganization.

He wants no more emergencies in this field.

PROMISES SURPRISES

The President told newspapermen there probably would be two or three things in his message to Congress tomorrow in addition to banking, but he said these would be "surprises."

Sweeping reorganization of the government, however, is known definitely to be one of the subjects.

High government officials said President Roosevelt will ask the new Congress to grant him the widest authority possible under the Constitution to effect immediate economies in government costs.

Shortly after the press conference, Senator McAdoo (Dem.), of California, visited the White House executive offices. He said:

"I discussed the general financial and banking situation with the President. I can not say any more because it might be taken as coming from the President. He will make his own recommendations."

High tribute to the people was paid by Secretary Woodin after his announcement regarding scrip in giving expression to an optimistic outlook for settlement of the banking impasse. He said:

"I am more than stunned with admiration for the co-operation of the American people in a crisis like this. Things are going very well. It is not due so much to the efficiency of this office as it is to the co-operative spirit of the American people."

CURRENCY RELEASED

Meanwhile, an invitation to trade frozen gold for currency to finance essential everyday affairs, such as the meeting of payrolls and food purchases, was put today before the vast Federal Reserve system.

The invitation—almost a direction—was in the form of new regulations sent to Federal Reserve banks by Secretary Woodin of the Treasury. In a word, he told Reserve banks they could give currency to members for "absolutely necessary" purposes in exchange for gold or gold currency.

Since President Roosevelt's drastic proclamation Sunday night, the gold the Reserve member banks held had been so locked up as to be virtually useless for currency purposes. Under the new regulations, however, it may be traded to the Reserve banks for currency to carry out the limited operations already approved by Secretary Woodin.

There were indications that this new gold-currency exchange order was to be coupled with an effort to obtain expansion under the Glass-Steagall act, which became law a year ago.

Under this act, Reserve banks were authorized to issue currency based on 40 per cent gold and 60 per cent government obligations.

The old law required the 60 per cent to be supplied by eligible commercial paper, and it was argued that currency expansion under that provision would tend to restrict credit by tying up more of that class of paper.

OFFICIALS HOPEFUL

Until President Roosevelt declared his gold embargo, however, few banks had taken advantage of the opportunity to use excess gold for additional currency.

Administration officials apparently hoped that with the permission to transfer free gold to Federal Reserve banks and get currency in its place, a wider utilization of this power would result.

It was known that Senator Glass, of Virginia, ardent opponent of anything he considers "inflation," had urged a greater use of the permission contained in the Glass-Steagall act in place of emergency steps.

On March 3, Federal Reserve banks had issued $3,865,000,000 of Federal Reserve notes.

Backing this they had $2,180,000,000 of gold, $1,032,000,000 of commercial paper, and $662,000,000 of government bonds.

Reports to the Treasury show that the banks actually hold about $220,000,000 more gold than they have up as security for currency, or a total of approximately $2,400,000,000.

Using the entire $2,400,000,000 gold as 40 per cent security, the banks may, if they hold sufficient government bonds to make up the remainder of the collateral, issue roughly a total of approximately $6,000,000,000 in currency.

LEHMAN DELAYS SCRIP ACTION

NEW YORK, March 8.—(INS.)—The question of issuing state scrip to meet the banking crisis was held in abeyance this afternoon by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman pending further communication with Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, the Governor announced after conferring with the directors of his newly-created emergency certificate corporation of New York, headed by ex-Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

Gov. Lehman obtained the impression thatt he federal government's abandonment of the projected policy of issuing scrip might mean thatt he government was opposed to the issuance of state or local scrip.

He said:

"I will co-operate to the fullest extent with the government and be guided by its desires."

He added that the corporation will continue to function regardless. If no scrip is issued the corporation will co-operate in relieving the banking situation.

Meanwhile money for payrolls and other necessities became available in New York City today when the Federal Reserve Bank came handsomely to the aid of the reopened local banks by releasing approximately $600,00,000 for their use.

WOODIN 'SEES LIGHT' IN CRISIS

WASHINGTON, March 8.—(INS.)—Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, in announcing today that there would be no scrip sanctioned as a circulating medium in the United States by the federal government, said:

"Where would we be if we had I. O. U.'s, clearing house certificates and other medium floating around?

"We have been trying to get away from that all along.

"I paved the way for this in the statement authorizing scrip in which it was stated that no scrip would be issued if the Secretary of the Treasury determined on some national plan.

"I am stunned in admiration at the co-operation of the people of the country in a crisis like this.

"We see light. This thing is not going to pieces. That's really the case."

Ellenbogen Faces Challenge in House

WASHINGTON, March 8.—(AP.)—Representative Darrow, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania Republican leader in the House, said today he believed that the right of Representative-elect Ellenbogen, Pittsburgh Democrat, to take his seat would be challenged tomorrow.

Ellenbogen, who will not have been seven years a citizen until June, has said he would go into the House when Congress convenes. The Constitution requires Representatives to have been citizens seven years.

NATIONAL CITY TO DROP UNIT

NEW YORK, March 8.—(AP.)—The National City Bank, second largest in the world, and the National City Company, its securities affiliate, are to be divorced.

James H. Perkins, chairman of the bank's board, said last night officials of the two concerns would seek to accomplish this, "as soon as it can be done in an orderly manner without sacrifice of the assets of the company and of the value which exists in its facilities for the purchase and distribution of investment securities of the highest grade."

Perkins returned yesterday from a visit to Washington, during which he conferred briefly with President Roosevelt.

Holmes Shuns Spotlight On 92nd Birthday

WASHINGTON, March 8.—(AP.)—Ninety-two years old today was Oliver Wendell Holmes, jurist, lecturer, lawyer and now principally a practitioner of the art of leisurely living.

His birthday didn't mean for him, as it might for some, a visit to the Supreme Court to receive the congratulations of those with whom he worked so long as a justice.

It meant, instead, that soon spring and summer, would be here and he could extend his automobile rides to the Virginia Civil War battlefields he loves and on which he was wounded several times as a Massachusetts volunteer.

Now bent with age, his primary diversions are reading, writing and driving. Occasionally, too, he takes groups of his close friends to matinee performances at the theaters.

But he never returns to the Supreme Court, where, before his retirement little more than a year ago, he became the oldest member ever to serve.

BANKERS HERE CONFUSED BY CHANGES

Chairman A. C. Robinson, of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, said:

"We're all upset about that announcement here."

J. D. Swigart, chief state bank examiner in this district, inferred that banks in nearby districts will accept the Pittsburgh scrip.

Meanwhile, the Republic Bank Note Company, which was to have delivered $5,000,000 in scrip to the banks by Friday, continued printing the certificates. The Bankers' Lighographing Company, doing some work for out-of-town banks, was temporarily shut down.

Banks today were completing preparations to meet emergency demands for money according to the regulations set down by the Treasury Department, so far as their cash resources allow. These preparations were to be completed during the day.

Their new powers, under Secretary of the Treasury Woodin's ruling include paying currency to provide for transportation of food, medicine and animal feed, to meet payrolls and cash Treasury checks.

The institutions here are expected to avail themselves of these new powers after a day of confusion, yesterday, caused by their failure to understand clearly Woodin's edict.

ACCEPT DEPOSITS

Meanwhile, the banks were expected to continue accepting deposits of cash, to be held in liquid condition, payable on demand in checks or cash.

This is interpreted to mean that a person can deposit money and check it out at will. These funds will be kept distinct and separate from his pre-holiday deposit.

These deposits must be kept in cash or on deposit in the Federal Reserve bank, earmarked as trust funds, or may be invested in Federal bonds. They must be paid at any time on demand.

Bankers here had completed arrangements for script, with the Clearing House Association having approved a plan for its issuance and with the Republic Bank Note Company, Forbes street, already working under heavy guard to deliver the engraved certificates by Friday.

The Clearing House had passed on the plan after a two-hour meeting yesterday, at which a plan similar to the New York Clearing House Association's was adopted.

COMMITTEE OF SIX

A committee of six, with A. W. McEldowney, of the Mellon National Bank, as chairman, had been appointed. Other members included F. F. Brooks, president of the First National Bank; L. H. Gethoefer, president of Pittsburgh-Peoples Trust Company; J. C. Chaplin, president of Colonial Trust Company; R. S. Euler, vice president of the Union Trust Company, and J. S. Smith, vice president of the Farmers Deposit National Bank.

A manager to administer issuance of the scrip and acceptance of the collateral securing it was to have been appointed today.

The certificates would have been in denominations of $5, $10 and $20. The Clearing House's announcement of the plan curtly said:

"Plan to issue Clearing House certificates unanimously approved on the basis adopted by New York Clearing House.

"Form of certificate approved, denominations 5, 10 and 20.

"Certificate Committee will control the issuance of the certificates and approve the collateral pledge to secure same."

Pittsburgh scrip to have been issued would have been $100,000,000 to $150,000,000.

Pittsburgh banks yesterday were accepting the new trust deposits, with the Farmers National issuing rubber stamps to customers with which to stamp their checks against new accounts "Trust Account."

Upon hearing of Woodin's apparent permission to issue money for the "necessities of life"—food and medicine—several banks stated they would do so.

It developed that the bankers would be held responsible for discriminating between "necessities" and non-necessities. There was also no available ruling on whether the individual could issue small checks for "necessities" or whether the permission was only for use in wholesale dealings, so the bankers revoked their earlier decision to transact the business.

During the night, a clarification of the order came from Washington in which it was stated the money could be issued for the "transportation" of the medicines and foods. Today bankers were expected to go ahead under the ruling.

The committee was headed by H. Stewart Dunn and includes Silas Waddell, Ronald Thompson and Charles Grum. Robert K. Cochrane presided at the meeting.

AID PRESIDENT, PINCHOT URGES

HARRISBURG, March 8.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today issued a proclamation calling upon Pennsylvanians "to give their loyal support" to President Roosevelt.

The proclamation:

"Whereas, the inauguration of a new President has awakened new hope in the people of the United States already sorely tried by the depression, and

"Whereas, wise and confident leadership is the greatest need of the nation at this time, and

"Whereas, such leadership to be successful must have loyal support, and

"Whereas, the prompt and courageous action of the President has already brought confidence to our people, and

"Whereas, the Governors of the states in conference assembled at Washington unanimously agreed to issue on this day proclamations in support of the leadership of the President.

"Now, therefore, I, Gifford Pinchot, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, do hereby call upon all men and women of good will throughout this state, without regard to politics, partisanship, or any other consideration except the common good, to give their loyal support to the President of the United States in his patriotic and promising effort to lead the nation out of the morass of doubt and fear in which it has been struggling and from which, under his leadership, it has already begun to emerge."

LOSSES DENIED BY BARDOLPH

A. S. Williams, auditor for the State Banking Department, was subjected to a grilling cross-examination today in the trial of Charles A. Bardolph, president of the closed Franklin Savings and Trust Company, charged with misuse of the bank's funds.

C. B. Prichard, defense counsel, stressed that with respect to 17 embezzlement counts against Bardolph, the money alleged to have been used in stock speculations, had been returned to the bank and that no loss was suffered.

Assistant District Attorney Harry R. Phillips planned to call George F. Taylor, Jr., former deputy secretary of banking and former receiver of the closed bank, as his next witness. After Taylor will come a long array of stock brokers and representatives of other banks, to detail Bardolph's alleged stock transactions with the bank's money.

LABOR OUTLINES RECOVERY PROGRAM

High Wage Standard, Five-Day Week Advocated

International News Service.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Declaring the situation "calls for direct, immediate action," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, today outlined a three-point program sponsored by organized labor for leading the country out of the economic depression.

This program, he said, calls for:

1—Restoration of the buying power of the country through establishment and maintenance of high wage standards.

2—Establishment of the five-day week and six-hour work day.

3—Creation of credit facilities to enable both large and small employers to finance production.

After declaring the present crisis had been brought about directly by the crumbling purchasing power of the people, as a result of wage slashes and widespread unemployment, Green, speaking at a luncheon of the New York Board of Trade, said:

"Suggestions for inflation of currency, for revaluation of our monetary standards and for the settlement of international debts and international problems, as remedies for unemployment, fall far short of the mark.

"The present situation calls for direct, immediate action. The clear call of the moment is to industrial management to make such adjustments and to initiate such policies as may be necessary to provide employment for idle people and to return them to the wage-earning class where they may exercise their maximum buying power and thus create a demand for marketable goods."

FILM WORKERS' PAY SLASHED

NEW YORK, March 8.—(AP.)—It was learned definitely today that members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America had put into effect an immediate cut of 25 to 50 per cent on the salaries of all workers in the New York offices and various exchanges throughout the country.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 8.—(AP.)—Faced with an ultimatum from producers that all film studio activities will cease unless drastic cuts are taken by all employes for an eight-week period, union labor leaders and officials of the Association of Motion Picture Producers prepared to confer today on the problem. The studios will remain open pending settlement of the proposal.

The proposal would call for a 50 per cent reduction in salaries of $50 weekly or more, with a minimum of $37.50 established. For those earning less than $50 weekly, the reduction would be 25 per cent with a minimum of $15 weekly. The reductions would extend only over an eight-week period and would be effective as of March 6.

JANET GAYNOR SEEKS DIVORCE

LOS ANGELES, March 8.—(AP.)—Jealousy is assigned by Janet Gaynor, screen star, as the principal cause of a marital rift which caused her to seek a divorce from Lydell Peck, screen writer.

The actress' complaint, filed yesterday, sets forth that Peck was unduly jealous and suspicious of her and suffered fits of anger and quarreled with her over petty things. This, she charged, interferred with her professional career.

The complaint also charges Peck drank intoxicating liquors to excess at parties they attended and used abusive language toward her.

Miss Gaynor and Peck were married in Oakland, Cal., September 11, 1929. The date of separation was given as last December 14.

Pittsburgh Girl Artist On Riviera Honeymoon

The Paris romance of a Pittsburgh girl artist, Dorothy Bugher, of 4433 Schenley Farms terrace, was finding its sequel in a honeymoon on the Riveria today.

Miss Bugher was married yesterday morning in the French capital to Jean Arthur Dupont, French businessman operating government concessions, it was learned from her mother, Mrs. Clarence S. Bugher.

A former student of the Carnegie Tech School of Design, Miss Bugher met Dupont more than two years ago, her mother said, at the home of an American friend, Robert Eakin, representing the Standard Oil Company in France. She was studying art at the time.

Lately pursuing her art studies in France, Miss Bugher hopes to exhibit a painting of her cousin, Katherine Naley, of Dormont, at the next Paris salon. It is now in Pittsburgh.

4 HELD IN DENVER KIDNAPING, 2 FLEEING U. S. TRAILED

BOETTCHER NET EXTENDED TO CANADA

Bank Holiday Blocks Efforts to Change $60,000 Ransom

DENVER, March 8.—(AP.)—The ever widening search for the abductors of Charles Boettcher, II., spread into Canada today.

Two of six persons against whom kidnaping charges have been filed are believed by Chief of Police Albert T. Clark, of Denver, to be fleeing this country. They are Vern Sankey, 41, named by police as the probable leader of the gang which held the 31-year-old wealthy broker captive more than two weeks and then collected $60,000 ransom for his relese, and George Elkhorn, alias Gordon Best, 33.

ESCAPE FROM RANCH

Police said both men formerly lived in Canada and were employed by the Canadian National Railway. They were believed to have started their flight from the vicinity of Sankey's ranch, 18 miles northeast of Chamberlain, S. D., where Arthur Youngberg, 37, one of the six charged, was arrested. The house has been identified, through descriptions given by Boettcher, as the place where he was held during ransom negotiations with his multi-millionaire father, Claude K. Boettcher.

Clark, directing the hunt, said he believed the two were heading into Canada to change into Canadian money the "hot" $60,000 in United States currency the gang received for liberating the scion of a pioneer Colorado family a week ago. They were paid with $5, $10 and $20 marked notes. Clark said:

"The men we seek were attempting to exchange the ransom money for other currency in the United States when the national bank holiday cut short their efforts."

Besides the two still at large, and Youngberg, those named in charges filed by Ralph L. Carr, United States District Attorney, are:

Mrs. Ruth Kohler, 39; Mrs. Vern Sankey, mother of two children, and Carl Pearce, 36. All are held in jail here.

'LINDY LAW' CHARGES

Carr said the charges are among the first filed under a new federal statute known as the "Lindbergh law," which allows a federal judge virtually unlimited authority to impose heavy sentence upon conviction. Carr declared:

"The prosecution will be pushed vigorously. Under the new law, the federal judge may impose any sentence up to life. Capital punishment is allowable if the victim dies during the kidnaping."

Carr added the prosecution had "a good case." It was understood a mass of evidence had been placed at his disposal.

Chief Clark said young Boettcher probably would leave today by plane for the isolated hideout to aid Denver officers in more definitely identifying the place.

Youngberg, after his arrest, attempted suicide by slashing his throat and wrists, but was treated by a physician who said he was not seriously hurt.

KIDNAPED BABY SAFE, KIN HELD

GARY, Ind., March 8.—(AP.)—Early return of 4-year-old Patricia Tripp to the maternal grandparents, from whose home she was abducted last November, was expected today as authorities prepared to prosecute seven persons on charges of kidnaping the child. Another suspect is sought.

Center of a court fight between relatives battling for her custody after the death of her parents, Patricia was reported by Mrs. Hamlin Smith to have been taken from her home near Rensselaer last December 14.

Those rounded up yesterday on charges of kidnaping are Mrs. Bessie Tripp, paternal grandmother of the missing child; Mr. and Mrs. August Johnson, uncle and aunt of the baby; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Lahlen. All are residents of Gary except Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, who live at Hebron. All denied connection with the abduction.

Prosecutor John Underwood said he had learned the child was well and unharmed and would be returned soon.

Fear Sharon Girl Kidnapers' Victim

SHARON, Pa., March 8.—Fear that Mary Roch, 17, Hickory High School senior, has met with foul play, was expressed by police today as they started a search for the girl, missing 24 hours. Schoolmates reported seeing her enter an automobile near her home yesterday morning.

Pamphlets Thrown At Belgian Queen

ANTWERP, Belgium, March 8.—(AP.)—Police arrested five Flemish extremists who threw pamphlets last night upon Queen Elizabeth's arrival at the Flemish opera to attend a performance. Four Socialist youths who hissed when she departed also were jailed. The Queen received enthusiastic cheers from the loyal population.

BERLIN-VIENNA UNION BALKED

VIENNA, Austria, March 8.—(AP.)—The "anschluss" movement for a union of Germany and Austria, spurred by Chancellor Hitler's electoral victory in Germany, bumped up against the stone wall of an Austrian dictatorship today.

Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss assumed the powers of dictator upon the invitations of President Wilhelm Miklas, who refused to accept the resignation of the Dollfuss cabinet.

A rigid censorship was ordered and political demonstrations of all kinds were banned. The Chancellor promised ruthless maintenance of public peace.

The action was believed aimed at the enthusiastic demonstrations throughout the country Monday night, celebrating the Hitler victory and urging the "anschluss." Alfred Frauenfeld, leader of the Hitlerites, had made a threat to seek power by force unless elections were permitted.

German Nudists Banned by Nazis

BERLIN, March 8.—(INS.)—Protecting women's "natural sense of shame," Capt. Herman Goering, Nazi minister without portfolio, moved today to enforce his proscription of German nudism.

In a decree banning the nudist movement, he declared:

"While the useful healing power of sun, air and water is beneficial to the human body, the so-called nudist movement must be rejected as a cultural aberration. The movement tends to destroy in women the natural feeling of shame and deprives men of their respect for women."

KAISER GIVES UP ALL HOPE OF THRONE

Fortune Fading, Seeks To Live 'Last' Years Quietly in Germany

LONDON, March 8.—(AP.)—Any prospect of former Kaiser Wilhelm seeking to regain the throne of Imperial Germany as a result of recent events there was stated today to have vanished through the former Sovereign's own act.

If the London Daily Mail's correspondent at Doorn, Holland, is accurately informed, Wilhelm Hohenzollern has completely and voluntarily abandoned the aim with which he has often been credited—of again wielding power over his own people.

Instead, he is reported seeking permission to spend his declining years in the privacy of his castle at Homburg vor der Hohe, the famous mineral spring resort in Hesse-Nassau. He was 74 years old in January.

PRINCESS HERMINE'S MISSION

This request to return to Germany was said to be the special mission undertaken by his second wife, Princess Hermine, when she recently went to Berlin from their residence in exile in Doorn.

Any anxiety the ex-Kaiser may have felt concerning the attitude of his sons toward his abandonment of claims to the throne were reportedly removed by a kind of confirmatory document of abdication. At a recent family council in Doorn, the sons were reported to have turned over all their "rights" to the throne to the ex-crown prince for his disposal.

DEPRESSION TOUCHES HIM

Meanwhile, the Ex-Kaiser was reported threatened with the necessity of cutting his household expenses because of the financial situation in the United States. Just how or to what extent his income might be affected was not disclosed. He was said to be anxiously watching fluctuations of the Dutch florin, as a drop in its value would make him comparatively poor.

Hitler Gets Vast Power, Made Prussian Premier

BERLIN, March 8.—(INS.)—Greater powers than possessed by any German statesman since Bismarck were vested in Chancellor Adolf Hitler today when the cabinet named him Premier of Prussia, the largest state in the Reich.

The cabinet's decision that the Hitler chancellorship should automatically include the Prussian premiership came as a surprise.

Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen and Capt. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, minister without portfolio, had been prominently mentioned for the post. The cabinet, however, voted to increase Hitler's dictatorial powers and thereby send Germany further along the road toward a 100 per cent Nazi state.

The German government, from Chancellor Hitler down, regrets and discountenances the attacks upon three American citizens by Nazi "storm troopers," United States Ambassador Frederic M. Sackett declared today.

Ambassador Sackett made representations regarding the attacks on behalf of Nathaniel Wolf, of Rochester, N. Y.; Edwin Dakin, of Hannibal, Mo., and Henry Sattler, of New York City.

Nazis Oust Noted German Conductor

DRESDEN, Germany, March 8.—(AP.)—Fritz Busch, a noted conductor, was compelled to retire during a performance of "Rigoletto" in the Saxon State Opera last night when uniformed Nazis booed him down.

Busch had appeared despite Nazi warnings that he would be beaten. Busch refused to join the National Socialist organization on the grounds that he considered his profession non-political.

TELLS OF BONDS VANISHING

Discovery of the disappearance of bonds and securities from a safe in a vault of the Ligonier National Bank at Ligonier, April 13, 1932, was told on the witness stand in Federal Court yesterday by C. C. Gonder, vice president of the bank, at the trial of George Clifford Frank, its former president, who is charged with embezzling and misapplying funds.

The value of the bonds involved was not disclosed in the testimony, given under direct examination conducted by First Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh. Gonder said the discovery was made by himself and a clerk. It was also brought out in testimony that a cashier's tray in the vault had not been disturbed.

Gonder said that soon after discovery of the alleged disappearance he informed Frank. Further testimony was given by witnesses called by the government on the embezzlement counts of the indictment.

Usual Enforcement Ordered by Pinchot

HARRISBURG, March 8.—(AP.)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today said Pennsylvania will "continue to enforce the prohibition laws as it always has."

PHILADELPHIA, March 8.—(AP.)—John D. Pennington, federal prohibition administrator for Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, said today he was "delighted" with the order to concentrate on sources of supply for enforcement of the prohibition laws. He said:

"Best results would have been had if the order had been issued 13 years ago."

Local Raiders' Policy 'Business as Usual'

City 'Speaks' Under Customary Peril From Police

Speakeasy proprietors, hearing the news today that they are safe from the federal agents, wondered just what Prohibition Director W. W. Woodcock's orders mean to the fellow behind the iron-bound doors.

Local officials said it didn't mean a thing. They will continue to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment, they said, as they have in the past.

Raiding county detectives and state police have been the principal thorns in the sides of the illicit vendors, while the local federal agents, for the most part, have confined their activities in recent years to the manufacturers and transporters.

Deputy Prohibition Administrator Robert S. Krause said his office never tapped wires to obtain evidence, and seldom resorted to the use of paid informers, and explained references to such practices are not applicable here.

County and city authorities said their attitudes toward enforcement will be unchanged.

Deputy Administrator Krause said:

"This office has received orders to put into effect at once the intention of Congress, expressed in providing the appropriation for the next fiscal year. This appropriation bill prohibits the expenditure of government funds for the purchase of evidence, payment of informers and wire-tapping to secure evidence of violations of the National Prohibition Act. This office has never tapped wires, and very seldom resorted to the use of paid informers, so we are not affected by the last two provisions.

"Our entire efforts will be concentrated on the sources of supply, and upon transportation of intoxicants.

"The responsibility for the suppression of speakeasies and local nuisances has been placed squarely on the shoulders of state, county and municipal authorities."

The Rev. Davis E. Cruea, secretary of the Pennsylvania Anti-Saloon League, said he would not comment on Woodcock's orders until he had an opportunity to study the matter.

Mrs. Ella M. George, honorary president of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., was ill at her home at Beaver Falls.

Comments from city and county officials were:

District Attorney Andrew T. Park:

"The liquor law enforcement machinery in Criminal Court will continue to operate as usual. We will handle any complaint that comes to us, other than anonymous ones. Any signed complaint will be investigated and the identity of the complainant kept secret."

Public Safety Director James M. Clark:

"The law remains the same to me, regardless of what Mr. Woodcock's attitude may be at this time. The Eighteenth Amendment still remains the law, and as I am sworn to uphold the law, I will continue to do so. The Police Department will carry on as it has been doing in the past."

Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh:

"The Police Department will continue to enforce this law as in the past. The Eighteenth Amendment is still on the statute books, and until it is abolished, I will continue to carry out the law."

About 50 enforcement agents in this district are affected by Director Woodcock's orders. They are assigned to the Western Pennsylvania District, consisting of 26 counties.

tion act, as amended and supplemented.

"That no funds hereby appropriated shall be used for the purchase of intoxicating liquors which are consumed by the investigator or anyone with him, nor to pay informers, nor for the purchase of evidence except that the director of prohibition may authorize the payments of rewards for information of major violations of the law."

WIRES SELDOM TAPPED

"A great deal has been said about wire tapping. The present method was approved by the House Committee on Expenditures in the executive departments in February of 1931. It was used exclusively against the larger syndicate operations, and out of a total of over 90,000 cases made during the last fiscal year, in only 102 of them.

"The restriction upon its use will therefore effect only our operations against the larger syndicates. It will be our problem to find an adequate substitute for it.

"The restriction upon the pay of informers will not affect our work at all in my judgment. In the District of Columbia, the bureau has paid for informers for the Metropolitan police, without having any control in their selection or over their operations. Some change in method must be found here."

Illinois Repealer Ready for Governor

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 8.—(INS.)—Presiding officers of the House and Senate today affixed their signatures to the bills repealing Illinois' prohibition laws. Later today the bills are to be sent by special messenger to Gov. Henry Horner in Chicago, for his approval.

WAR LORD KILLS GOVERNOR WHO LOST JEHOL

International News Service.

TOKIO, March 8.—In swift reprisal for the loss of Jehol Province to the Japanese, Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang today shot and killed former Gov. Tang Yu-Lin, vanquished by the invaders who captured Jehol City in their campaign for annexation of the province to Manchukuo.

According to advices here, Marshal Chang killed Tang as punishment for what Chinese leaders consider was the former Governor's treachery. It was also reported Marshal Chang resigned as military commander of North China, and that he contemplated flight to France.

Tang was recently caught after he tried to transport his personal belongings from the lost stronghold of Jehol City (Chengteh), capital of the province, to Peiping in 200 of Marshal Chang's army trucks.

MARSHAL RESIGNS

PEIPING, China, March 8.—(AP.)—Acknowledging his failure to stem the Japanese advance, Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang resigned today as commander-in-chief of the Chinese armies in North China.

Only 35 years old, Marshal Chang was the last Chinese war lord of Manchuria and directed the losing fight against the Japanese for the past 18 months in that territory, at Shanhaikwan and in Jehol.

His resignation was telegraphed to the Nationalist government at Nanking.

The young marshal's conduct of the Chinese defense has met with frequent criticism. He was finally driven from Chinchow, his last Manchurian stronghold, in January, 1932, four months after the Japanese military invasion of his dominion began. Since then he has made his headquarters at Peiping.

PEIPING ROAD BOMBED

PEIPING, March 8. — (INS.) — Japan carried the conflict against China south of the Great Wall for the first time today when Japanese airplanes dropped bombs along the road to Peiping, 15 miles south of Kupei Pass.

The bombs were aimed at a Chinese military supply dump.

GENEVA, March 8.—(INS.)—Soviet Russia's refusal to participate on the League of Nations advisory committee of 21 for settlement of the Sino-Japanese conflict was formally announced today.

Notice of Russia's decision was contained in a letter to Sir Eric Drummond, secretary general of the league.

CERMAK BODY ARRIVES HOME

CHICAGO, March 8.—(AP.)—A special train brought the body of Anton J. Cermak today back to the city in which he rose from an immigrant boy to mayor.

A group of city officials carried the flag-draped casket through a crowd estimated at 20,000 to a hearse. The body was taken to the Cermak home, where the mayor's wife died five years ago.

In the delegation of city officials were Gov. Henry Horner, City Comptroller M. S. Szymczak, all of the city's 50 Aldermen, Corporation Counsel William H. Sexton, other members of his cabinet, and department heads from the City Hall.

'Unknown' Pet Dog Guards Cermak Bier

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 8.—(AP.)—Fagin, the pedigreed bulldog sent from California to Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago, while he was in a Miami hospital, rides on guard in the death coach with the master he never knew.

When the dog was sent to Florida by airplane recently, his owner sent a message to the Mayor: "Thought you might like a companion while you are in the hospital." Mayor Cermak was so ill, however, that he was never permitted to see the dog. Fagin will become the pet of the Mayor's grandchildren.

latter's appearance yesterday before the committee, with King refusing emphatically to interpret and amplify his statement of two weeks ago before the committee that there had been sufficient investigation for a basis to frame legislation tightening the utility law.

CHARGES DOUBLE CROSS

The Governor insisted that King put in the official records of the committee a statement similar to that he made in the Sun-Telegraph 10 days ago, that he and the Governor were in entire accord on utility questions, that the Governor's charges of extortion and allegations of corruption had been completely substantiated by the preliminary report of the committee, made early in January.

Again King refused, and in a bristling interchange with the Governor the commission chairman, who is no respecter of persons, intimated that the Governor was deserting him. King intimated the same charge against one of the highest members of the Governor's cabinet, it is understood, and asserted he was being double-crossed by two more of the Governor's closest advisers, with both of whom King has worked in harmony for years.

NEAR FISTIC CLASH

The verbal passages between one of these advisers and King reached a serious stage, it is reported, and verged on a physical encounter. However, the incident passed off with nothing more than bitter language.

The displeasure of the Governor was not allayed by King's parting pleasantry to the committee yesterday, that he had always been treated courteously by its members. Shortly thereafter the Governor in a statement said he was not surprised at Eaton's resignation, because the counsel had desired a thorough investigation, which the committee was unwilling to make.

King has lost caste in the very highest circles of the Pinchot administration. He now is referred to as the "prima donna" because of his refusal to meet the Governor's request, which might have spurred the committee to action. One of the Governor's closest advisers yesterday said he would be glad if King resigned immediately.

EATON PROVIDES PROBLEM

Meanwhile, the Senate committee has a hot potato in the Eaton resignation, and doesn't know how to let go. Members of the committee recognize that the dramatic resignation of the Pittsburgh lawyer, with the implication to be drawn by the public, has put them on trial.

The committee twice met in executive session yesterday in an effort to prevail upon Eaton to withdraw his resignation. At the first, into which Eaton blundered to say farewell to some of the Senators, he was obdurate in his refusal. The second he did not even attend, and declined an invitation to renew the discussion.

The committee, which had intended to meet this morning, decided to let things simmer until next week, meanwhile pushing its efforts to have Eaton return as counsel.

INSISTS ON ACTION

While he refused to make any public statement beyond the resignation he offered the committee, it is known Eaton is disposed to give no ear to the committee's pleading unless first it secures passage of the resolution continuing the life of the committee, which carries an appropriation for investigation and evidences an intention of conducting a real inquiry, takes off the handcuffs he has worn for several weeks, and gives him authority to go ahead and summon witnesses for examination.

The resolution has lain in Appropriations Committee since the middle of January, with no perceptible effort made by the Utility Committee to have it passed.

As long ago as February 13 Eaton intimated an intention of resigning unless the committee woke from its lethargy. That letter, which criticised the committee for not organizing, led to the hasty election of McClure as chairman, but brought no response to Eaton's demand for an active resumption of the investigation, with the calling of utility chiefs as witnesses.

REVEALS SUPPRESSED NOTE

Eaton then wrote that "the investigation into corruption is incomplete and should be continued at once."

If the committee did not intend to push a real investigation, Eaton wrote, there was no longer necessity for burdening the taxpayers with the cost of himself and his associate counsel, J. Julius Levy and J. Cullen Ganey.

It was this letter, which never had been made public, which Eaton read into the record late yesterday afternoon before he climaxed a series of clashes with McClure by his stunning resignation.

Eaton also was angered at some phrases in a letter King wrote him earlier in the day in response to a request that he produce certain information before the committee. Some of this information, King wrote, would be asked "by no lawyer of standing in the commonwealth," and other requests were "obviously unethical and unreasonable."

CITIZEN HOOVER WINDOW SHOPS

NEW YORK, March 8.—(AP.)—Walking abroad without a secret service guard for only the second time in more than four years, Herbert Hoover today enjoyed a self-conducted window shopping jaunt down Park avenue.

The ex-President was recognized by few persons as he left his closely guarded hotel apartment for his morning walk, accompanied by his youngest son, Allan, and his secretary, Lawrence Richey.

Several persons spoke to him by name, and he returned their greeting with a nod, but for the most part his high-turned collar against the heavy mist and light rain afforded him the non-recognition he apparently desires.

During the day, Richey said, Hoover intended to take care of strictly "personal business." Several callers dropped into his apartment, among them Walter Brown, former Postmaster General, and Patrick J. Hurley, erstwhile Secretary of War.

The former President set out somewhat later this morning for his constitutional than he did yesterday. Instead of walking uptown, as he did then, he turned south and strolled down Park avenue, stopping whenever something of interest caught his eye.

Richey said Hoover was still undecided as to when he would set out for his California home.

House Gets Bills For Changes in School Code

HARRISBURG, March 8.—(INS.)—A half dozen bills covering main provisions of the late proposed school code were reported to the House today from the Committee on Education.

They provide for larger school districts, making compulsory the consolidation of districts with a combined population under 1,000. Larger districts would be permitted to consolidate if they desired.

The $53,000,000 appropriation to schools for the 1933-35 biennium would be given on the basis of a $25 reduction per teacher during 1933-34 and a reduction of $40 for 1934-35. Districts would be permitted to cut salaries 10 per cent and more with the consent of the State Council of Education.

PINCHOT GETS BANK SAFETY MEASURE

BULLETIN.

HARRISBURG, March 8.—(INS.)—The Sordoni emergency banking bill became law today, Gov. Gifford Pinchot this afternoon signed the measure, which the assembly had passed a few hours earlier.

HARRISBURG, March 8.—Pennsylvania's Legislature today tackled emergency banking measures and sent to the Governor the Sordoni bill before adjourning for the week. All other important legislation of a controversial nature was laid aside.

Gov. Pinchot's signature was assured and banks of the state, accordingly, will be able, with permission of the Banking Department, to stay or limit withdrawals on old accounts and accept new deposits which must be kept 100 per cent liquid for withdrawal on demand. The bill is the validating measure of the resolution adopted Monday night of last week.

HITCH AVERTED

The measure was threatened in the House yesterday when it was sent to committee, but today that branch passed it by a vote of 160 to 8. Representative Darlington Hoopes, Berks County Socialist, opposed the bill on the ground that it will not correct present conditions. Instead, he said, he favored a Bank of the United States with branches throughout the country and a guarantee of deposits.

Hoopes charged the bill had the effect of setting up a dictatorship for the protection of a "few men," asserting that bankers are grossly incompetent.

Those voting "no" were Hoopes, another Socialist; one Republican, McGregor, Armstrong County; an independent and four Democrats.

Soon afterwards the Senate concurred in the House amendments. These amendments limited the effectiveness of the act to six months dating from February 27, last, with the provision that the Governor could proclaim its extension for a period of not more than two years if necessary.

NEW LEGISLATION

As the Sordoni bill left the Legislature, other banking measures were introduced. Sordoni submitted, and the Senate passed, on first reading, another bill which places scrip counterfeiting under the penalties established for currency counterfeiting.

Senator Parkinson, Greene, sponsored a bill by which the state would insure bank deposits. Assessments on banks would be used to create a fund from which depositors of closed banks would be paid in full. The liquidated assets eventually would be turned back into the fund.

Another bill, offered by Senator Scott, Centre, empowers the Governor to proclaim bank holidays.

Bill Proposes Ban On Moving by Night

HARRISBURG, March 8.—(INS.)—Persons who years ago found it more profitable to "move than pay rent" and accordingly "skipped by the light of the moon" would be restrained in the future if a bill introduced today by Representative Louis Schwartz (Philadelphia) is enacted.

The bill would prohibit the moving of goods and chattels between 7 p. m. and 7 a. m. without a permit from the local police.

Would Ban Radios In Motor Vehicles

HARRISBURG, March 8.—(INS.)—Jazz music, speeches, market reports and other features of the air would become things of the past on Pennsylvania highways under the provisions of a bill introduced today by Representative Louis Schwartz, Philadelphia. The measure would prohibit the operation of radios in motor vehicles.

SUNDAY SPORTS BILL AGAIN IN SENATE

HARRISBURG, March 8.—Bills to amend the Sunday blue laws received attention in both branches of the Legislature today.

The Schwartz measure came back to the floor of the Senate after the Law and Order Committee had amended it to exempt golf, tennis and swimming from the Sabbath games requiring licenses. The bill goes on the second reading calendar Monday night, and if approved, will be voted on finally next Tuesday. It will be possible to send it to the Governor on the same day.

In the House, the Steedle (Allegheny) bill was taken from the second reading calendar, where it has reposed for two weeks. Approved today, it comes to a final vote Monday night. The measure provides referenda on legalizing all week day activities on Sunday; permitting outdoor sports with and without admission charges, and allowing indoor sports and amusement with and without admittance fees.

PUSH WAGE BILL ENACTMENT

HARRISBURG, March 8.—(AP.)—A drive for enactment of the minimum wage bill and the old age pension amendment provision of unemployment insurance, and "adequate" relief by the present Legislature, is under way by the Pennsylvania Security League.

The League's executive committee, after a meeting last night, issued a statement calling for higher standards of relief, no commissaries and representation of both employed and unemployed on county relief boards.

Proposing cash relief, and payment of workers on jobless relief projects at the prevailing wage rate, it suggested money be raised through a five per cent income tax, with a rebate for incomes under $5,000.

Ralph E. Turner, of Pittsburgh, was elected temporary chairman of the committee, Mrs. Ludwig Meyer, of Erie, temporary vice-chairman, and Stephen Raushenbush, of Harrisburg, executive secretary.

URGE SPEEDING RELIEF BILLS

HARRISBURG, March 8.—(AP.)—Restive Democrats today urged the General Assembly to clear away all legislation and give immediate attention to unemployment relief.

Senator Henry L. Snyder, Lehigh, made the proposal. He introduced a resolution by which both branches would bind themselves to consider nothing else until relief measures have been enacted. Provisions were made, however, for action on emergency banking law amendments.

The resolution, which was sent to the Appropriations Committee, notes that all relief funds would be exhausted by April 1. It cites the speed with which the Legislature enacted the bank deposit restrictions of February 27 and advocates the same policy for providing relief.

Sailor Confesses Slaying of Boy, 14

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 8.—(AP.)—Henry Francis Hoffman, 27-year-old sailor who chose a 14-year-old boy to slay because "I suddenly decided to kill somebody and to be hanged for it," was under observation today as to his mental condition.

Hoffman called police and told them he had killed a youth known as J. P. McDonald, Jr., and that they would find the body in a hotel room. Police went to the room and discovered the body.

Council to Discuss Garbage Contract

Members of Council will meet with Dr. William W. McFarland, director of the Department of Public Health, March 15, to discuss the drawing up of a long-term contract for the removal of the city's garbage and rubbish.

The meeting was set after Councilman P. J. McArdle had presented a resolution to Council calling for a discussion of the long-term contract with Dr. McFarland.

The Duquesne Club team in the inter-club duplicate bridge match strengthened its hold on first place last night by defeating the Engineers' Society, 32 to 22. Harvard-Yale-Princeton and the University Club are tied for second place as result of University's victory over the Pittsburgh Athletic Association and the defeat of the H-Y-P team by the Keystone Athletic Club.

Youth Hurt in Crash Near Blawnox Dies

James R. McGinty, 21, of 300 Tenth street, Sharpsburg, died last night in Pittsburgh Hospital from injuries he met February 22, when an automobile in which he was a passenger struck a curb in Freeport road, near Blawnox, the Coroner's office reported.

The driver, Paul V. Montgomery, of 114 Twenty-first street, Sharpsburg, was ordered to post bond for an inquest.

4-Legged Dinner To Be Provided By Pet Rooster

STOCKTON, Cal., March 8.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. Carl Howard and a couple of friends are going to sit down to dinner some Sunday and every one at the table is going to be able to get a leg off Howard's pet rooster.

The rooster is a year old and is normal in all ways except for two extra legs which jut out beside the two regulation ones.

WOMEN TO SCAN VOTE MACHINES

To satisfy themselves that the improved voting machines of Allegheny County are fool proof and vote thief proof, members of the Allegheny County League of Women voters will inspect the machines Friday at noon in the new County Building. Director William T. Rees, of the Bureau of Elections, announced bureau attaches would conduct a demonstration attended by the Commissioners and Solicitors.

The county has two of its 1,100 machines repaired and next week expects to have prepared specifications for renovating the remainder. Mrs. J. O. Miller and Mrs. R. Templeton Smith made the request for the demonstration to Director Rees.

BILL TO DELAY EVICTIONS PASSED

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, March 8.—The unemployed and destitute throughout Pennsylvania were temporarily saved from eviction from their homes today when the Senate and House passed a resolution staying execution of all writs of seizure and levy until April 3 of this year.

The resolution, introduced by Senator James J. Coyne, Allegheny, authorized Common Pleas Courts to permit the temporary abandonment of Sheriff sales and levies on personal property. It also relieved all sheriffs from any liability.

DETERMINE SEX BY PRE-NATAL TESTS

Anxious Pittsburgh fathers and mothers-to-be may soon be able to know the sex of their future offspring as long as four months in advance of the stork's official visit, if experiments now being conducted at Elizabeth Steel Magee Hospital continue to prove successful.

The Magee scientists are working along the same lines as the California scientist who recently announced his discovery of a method for accurately predicting the sex of unborn children.

Guinea pigs have been used successfully in the experiments, according to prominent Pittsburgh obstetricians who point out that in California experiments the sex of the child was correctly predicted in 80 out of the first 86 cases tried. Dr. John H. Born, of San Francisco, who, in collaboration with E. I. Sugarman devised this test, believes that improved methods will make possible even greater accuracy.

MINE BREWERY SUSPECTS FREE

Herman Marwitz and William Silvasy were acquitted in Federal Court before Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker on a charge of operating a "wildcat" brewery in an abandoned coal mine in South Hampton Township, Westmoreland County. The plant was raided June 9, 1931.

Silvasy testified he had no connection with the plant and when arrested near the mine he was engaged in training a dog for fox hunting. Marwitz said he went to the plant to sell an automobile.

John Seibert pleaded guilty of possessing liquor and operating a club as a common nuisance of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Pike street, Canonsburg. He was fined $100.

1,758,000 FED IN BREAD LINE

Some idea of the magnitude of the work of Father Cox among Pittsburgh's destitute is reflected in figures from his relief headquarters yesterday. These disclose that in 118 weeks he has given free meals to 1,758,000 men and boys in his breadline averaging 1,400 a day. Conditions today, however, are such that the breadline averages 2,500 daily. In this same period he has given out 410,000 baskets of food and has furnished clothing to 3,600 men and 500,700 women and children all this without aid from city, county, state or federal funds.

Father Cox gratefully acknowledges the co-operation of the Sun-Telegraph in his efforts to cope with the various angles of the unemployment situation which now present problems more urgent than ever.

Yesterday on WJAS he said had it not been for a letter from a listener to the Sun-Telegraph Globe Trotter his birthday probably would have passed unnoticed. He told his radio audience he would appreciate Sun-Telegraph subscriptions as a birthday remembrance instead of cards, and the response was instanteous and gratifying. For every subscription Father Cox gets for the Sun-Telegraph, he is given a liberal cash commission. He already has received more than $1,100 from this source.

Suspects in Detroit Robbery Death Held

Three men arrested in Ross street yesterday for questioning in connection with the holdup of a Detroit store in which James Battle, 21, of Bedford avenue, was shot and killed two weeks ago, were held in the county jail today.

The three were arrested by County Detectives Peter Connors and Michael Ford in an automobile similar to the one used by the killers in escaping, the sleuths said. They gave their names as Guy Cicco, 26; Grank Amatea, 25, and Joseph Newman, 26, all of Penn street, Braddock.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 8.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

"I am glad it was me instead of you, Mr. President."

I hope they use that. No tombstone in America could carry a finer tribute. His courage, his fighting spirit, were great, but most of all his devotion to his family during his battle for life endeared Mayor Cermak to his adopted country.

On another train returning home forever goes Tom Walsh to Montana, whose epitaph might read "Fairness lost a friend, crookedness lost an enemy." But it's only the inspiration of those who die, that make those who live realize what constitutes a useful life.

Yours, WILL.

posits 95 per cent of them in various other banks selected on account of their soundness and stability.

But whether these other banks are sound and stable or not, as long as the government is sound and stable the safety of deposits in and through the federal postal savings banks is guaranteed and assured.

Why, then, do not the people deposit their funds in the federal postal savings banks, where these funds are now already guaranteed by the government?

There lies absolute safety as long as the government endures.

THE REASON for not depositing funds extensively in the postal savings banks is that the government restricts and limits such deposits to $2,500 per person.

Consequently after a depositor has deposited $2,500 of his money in the postal savings bank where the deposit is guaranteed by the government, he has thereafter to deposit the rest of his money in banks where it is not guaranteed by the government.

And it is the doubt of the complete safety of deposits in these other banks, whether that doubt be unfounded or not, which is responsible for the withdrawal of funds from these other banks and for the hoarding which has precipitated the present panic.

THEREFORE, the Hearst papers urge upon the federal government to raise the limitation on deposits in the federal postal savings bank and to allow the public to deposit their funds to the extent of $10,000 or even $100,000 per person in these government-guaranteed postal savings banks.

THIS MODIFICATION of restrictions on deposits would bring billions of dollars out of hoarding where these dollars are in continual danger and put them into the postal savings banks where their safety would be guaranteed.

Furthermore, 95 per cent of these deposits would go promptly through the postal savings banks into the other banks of the country, but always under government guarantee of safe restoration to their owners on demand.

This would relieve the strain on the banks of the country and the stringency of circulating medium, and would end hoarding.

It would restore business activity, furnish money for wages and enable employment and industry to proceed in regular and proper manner.

It would not injure the banks, it would benefit the banks, because it would increase government deposits in the banks and strengthen them to that extent.

It is true that the postal savings banks pay only 2 per cent interest, but any sensible person would rather have 2 per cent interest where his money is safe than 4 per cent interest where it might not be safe.

AND THAT CAUTION on the part of the public and that confidence in the government are the things which would bring money out of hoarding immediately and restore it to its proper function as a circulating medium.

It is possible also that the postal savings banks could be made properly and advantageously into commercial banks by allowing deposits to be drawn upon by check for the payment of wages and purchases and the other requirements of business.

On commercial deposits of this character the postal savings banks would probably pay no interest, but the fact that the money deposited in those banks is safely and surely guaranteed by the government is the thing which would revive confidence and result in hoarded money being deposited in those banks and restored to circulation.

Why cannot the government therefore immediately change the rules and regulations affecting the postal savings banks so as to extend the government guarantee to large accounts totaling anywhere from $10,000 to $100,000?

There is no step which would more quickly restore general confidence and tend to terminate this intolerable and unwarrantable depression.

SEEK HOSPITAL FUNDS HERE

HARRISBURG, March 8.—(INS.)—Representative Joseph G. Steedle, Allegheny, had two bills in House committee today seeking appropriations to the Department of Health for the maintenance of hospitals and asylums.

Pittsburgh institutions named included Allegheny General Hospital, $181,200; Belvedere Hospital, $3,900; Children's Hospital, $100,000; Elizabeth Steel Magee, $45,000; Eye and Ear Hospital, $21,500; Homeopathic Medical and Surgical Hospital, $86,000; Montefiore Hospital, $64,500; Passavant Hospital, $54,700; St. John's General Hospital, $46,000; South Side Hospital, $71,000; Tuberculosis League, $89,400; Western Pennsylvania Hospital, $162,000.

Appropriations proposed for Pittsburgh homes were:

Children's Aid Society of Western Pennsylvania, $19,500; Coleman Industrial Home for Colored Boys, $2,250; Colored Women's Relief Association of Western Pennsylvania, $1,875; Curtis Home for Destitute Women and Children, $4,125; First Allegheny Day Nursery, $3,750; Home for Colored Children, $2,925; Industrial Home for Crippled Children, $15,000; New Future Association, $750; Pennsylvania Association for the Blind, $22,500; Home for Babies, $9,375; Woods Run Settlement Association, $1,275; Zoar Home for Mothers, Babies and Convalescents, $1,875.

LIMIT RUM BILL TO BEER, WINE

HARRISBURG, March 8.—(AP.)—The House Liquor Committee has decided that liquor legislation to be proposed at the present session of the Legislature shall cover only the manufacture of beer and light wine.

The decision, a complete reversal of last week's understanding when all spiritous liquors were included in the study being made, is to cover the regulation of traffic in such beverages as Congress soon may legalize.

Spirituous liquor control, therefore, will be left to the 1935 General Assembly, unless the Eighteenth Amendment repealer is approved by the states. Then a special session of the Legislature would be necessary, the committee feels, to regulate the manufacture and sale of all liquor.

The committee has abandoned the idea of setting up liquor commissions in the larger counties and will advocate issuance of licenses by judges of Quarter Sessions courts in all the counties.

This was decided upon following opposition from Philadelphia, Allegheny, third and fourth class counties that the commission plan would be too expensive.

BRUSHTON PAIR ROUTS GUNMEN

Two gunmen prowling in the yard of the City Lumber Company, 7414 Susquehanna street, Brushton, fled when J. F. Farrell, manager of the firm, and William Henning, an East Liberty plumber, ran out of the office and pursued them last night.

A watchman who saw the pair loitering in the yard with drawn revolvers, ran into the office and informed Farrell and Henning.

Each picking up a piece of pipe, they ran into the yard and the prowlers fled to an automobile in which two other men sat, and escaped. A description of the two was broadcast.

3 SQUADS SOLVE 'BOMB PLOT'

Three radio police automobiles sped to 1331 Reedsdale street shortly before dawn today in response to a woman's alarm that someone was attempting to "blow up" Jack Vancheri's confectionery store at that address.

Mrs. G. Snitzer, who lives on the second floor of the building, told North Side police she heard a "ticking noise" in the store.

The "ticking noise" police found was due to a defective "buzzer" which warns Vancheri of the entrance of a customer. While they were seeking the "bomb" the buzzer righted itself and calm descended upon the building.

SMOKE CAUSES CRASH, 3 HURT

Three persons were injured when two trucks crashed head-on on the Twenty-eighth Street Bridge late yesterday. Smoke from trains beneath the bridge blinded the drivers, according to police.

Samuel Klein, 22, of 507 North St. Clair street, and Stanley Block, 19, of 702 Attica street, the drivers, were uninjured.

'BLACK DEATH' STRIKES ISLAND

WATERTOWN, N. Y., March 8.—(INS.)—Three children have died of the "black death," which is terrorizing some 250 residents of Grindstone Island in the St. Lawrence River. The third child, Elizabeth Dano, 11, died of diphtheria yesterday despite the efforts of Dr. J. T. Fowkes to save her.

The island, located miles from shore and amid dangerous ice floes, is difficult to reach.

The disease broke out about two weeks ago and there are about 20 cases. Anne Carnegi, 3, died Monday of the disease, and Raymond Garnseyo, 3, died Tuesday.

No boats can be run to the disease area because of the ice and trips are made by the physician and his party afoot over the hazardous softening ice, dragging a flat-bottom boat with them.

Auto Thief Wins Judge's Probation

John W. Whitelaw, 25, upon conviction in Federal Court on a charge of transporting a stolen automobile from Pittsburgh to Hollidays Cove, W. Va., was placed upon probation for three years by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker. The offense occurred April 18, 1930.

Whitelaw was a fugitive from justice two years, according to special agents of the U. S. Bureau of Investigation, who said he was captured while hiding behind an ash pile in the home of his mother in Parnassus.

Beechview Planning Three Improvements

Committees of the Beechview Civic League are already at work on the threefold improvement plan for that district, for which they will ask Council's aid next fall, according to President C. V. Roper.

The proposed improvements include the paving of the space between Beechview avenue and Broadway to make them one street, improvement of the Crane avenue outlet to Saw Mill Run boulevard, and the erection of a local swimming pool, Roper said.

TWO FAMILIES ROUTED BY FLAMES

Fires in Mt. Oliver and Dormont early today routed two families from their beds, one the flames were sweeping through a bedroom floor where a man was sleeping.

Fire Chief Chester Albright, of Dormont, said an investigation would be made of the blaze there as a result of discovery of cans of gasoline in the dwelling.

Nicholas J. Bauer, a street car motorman, discovered his home at 530 Ottillia street, Mt. Oliver, in flames when he arose this morning. Smelling smoke, he investigated, and in a bedroom occupied by A. J. Fess, brother of Bauer's wife, the flames were creeping through the floor and licking at Fess' bed.

ROUSES FAMILY

Bauer aroused his wife, a daughter, Cecelia, 13; a son, Nicholas G., 17; Mrs. Bauer's mother, Mrs. Catherine M. Fess, 74, and a niece, Gloria Fess, 5. Firemen controlled the flames. They estimated the loss at $5,000.

The home of Frederick Schmitt, 2722 Voelkel avenue, Dormont, burned while Schmitt and his wife were visiting in Cleveland. Fire Chief Albright and Councilman John W. Lang, chairman of the fire and water committee, of Dormont, said two five-gallon cans, partly filled with gasoline, were found near a furnace in the basement, and another five-gallon can was in the bathroom.

FEARED MAN TRAPPED

It was believed for a time that Schmitt's son, Frederick, Jr., 20, was trapped, but later it was learned he works at night and was not at home.

The fire spread to the roof of Alfred Camp's home at 2720 Voelkel avenue, but was checked. Camp, aroused by the crackling of the flames, awakened his wife and nine children and all fled in their night clothing to the homes of neighbors.

Volunteer Fireman Thomas Schenbaugh was cut on the wrist by glass, and Paul Barker, 26, of Connecticut avenue, who was helping the firemen, collapsed and was sent home after receiving medical attention. Chief Albright estimated the damage at $7,000.

KIRK Q. BIGHAM WILLS $300,000

Kirk Q. Bigham, the once prominent Mt. Washington businessman and political figure, left an estate valued at $300,000 in his will probated today. The document was dated January 9, 1933. Bigham died February 27.

Albert C. Oakley, who Bigham said aided him in the management of his property, was given the privilege of buying a property for $5,000. The will directed payment of $50 a month each for the rest of their lives to Mrs. Mary MacMahon, 201 Edith street, and Mrs. Kate Fenessy.

To his widow, Bigham willed one-third of the residue of the surplus of the net income of the estate in lieu of $250 a month she received under an ante-nuptial agreement. One-third was left to a cousin, Augusta S. Dorth, who Bigham said "has always been a sister to me," and one-third to a nephew, the Rev. Thomas J. Bigham. The will stated a sister, Mrs. Mary A. Stout, "has already received more than her full share."

Oakley and Charles M. Johnston were named executors and trustees.

7 Fishermen Rescued Clinging to Rigging

BEACH HAVEN, N. J., March 8.—(INS.)—Seven New York fishermen were rescued by Coast Guards early today when their 52-foot, two-masted sailing smack, the Anna Ella, piled up on a bar off Loveladies Point and was dashed to pieces after being driven off its course by brisk winds.

Capt. Jack Rasmussen and his crew of six were found clinging to the rigging of the 27-ton boat as high seas battered the smack to pieces on the bar. The Anna Ella, owned by Frank Wilkinson, of the Fulton Fish Market, New York, left there Monday for Baltimore.

Beechview Man Has Scrip, But It's From 1874

A piece of scrip, which which during a depression back in 1874, was worth $10 when presented to the First National Bank, of Warren, O., is now in the possession of Fred Moeschberger, of 1509 Dagmar avenue, Beechview.

The bill was handed down by the late B. F. Lintz, a Civil War veteran, and Mr. Moeschberger's father-in-law. Lintz, Mr. Moeschberger explained, was left holding $5,000 worth of the scrip because he failed to cash it at the required time.

It was issued by the government on the First National Bank of Warren, O.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

The Twentieth Century Club was as teeming with fashion models and those there to see them yesterday afternoon as the great outdoors was with rain.

Never have I seen a larger throng of folks in that always popular club as yesterday. The show, quite the smartest thing I've ever seen, was put on by the Junior League in the dining room.

On High Runway

You know how enormous the dining room of the club is. Yet there wasn't room enough to seat all the spectators. And hundreds were sitting in chairs placed at the last minute in the fortunately larger foyer outside the dining room. And the models really had to stage two shows!

In one end of the dining room was constructed a high runway to serve as a stage.

I'd be very near right if I said the entire social register was there. It was one of the largest gatherings of the smart set in months with all the Junior League membership there, debs, their mothers and grandmothers.

And the most charming feature of the show, I thought, was the showing of children's clothes by an adorable group of little boys and girls, children of Junior Leaguers and others of the smart set.

League Models

The Junior League girls modelled negligees, trick sports suits and more formal afternoon suits and evening dresses and beach clothes and hats.

One of the loveliest of the evening gowns was a shining, black-spangled black lace dress, modelled by tall, slender and blonde Betty Higgins. It was cut low in the back, fitted the figure and ended in a train.

Another stunning evening dress was modelled by Mrs. Leonard S. Mudge. It was of black and white slightly rough crepe with the skirt of black having a deep godet of the white, with the white predominating, was cut wide over the shoulders.

Evening Dress

Mrs. Alan Magee Scaife modelled a ruffled ashes of rose chiffon tea gown.

Mrs. George A. Kelly III, and Mrs. J. Porter Gillespie looked smart in spring suits. Mrs. Kelly's was of black with a brief jacket and the gayest of red striped blouses. Mrs. Gillespie's was all of a peachy-biege wool with fox fur trimmings of matching color.

An interesting suit, something new in sports, was modelled by smart Ada B. Wardrop. The skirt was of dark grey tweedy material with a tailored, hip-length belted jacket of black wool. With it she wore a hat to match the skirt and white Ascot tie.

Mrs. John S. Laughlin with her dark brown hair looked charming in a creamy yellow rough crepe negligee having bands of mink at the elbow from which the sleeves fell in deep, full points.

Models Negligee

An unsual suit of black, worn by Mrs. George L. Craig, Jr., had a double cape of the material banded luxuriously in silver fox.

Another suit that was ever so attractive for sports wear was modelled by Mary Elizabeth Floyd. The skirt was of yellow wool with a jacket of yellow and brown generous checks and a deep cape of the checked material.

There was something quite Grecian about Harriet Ramsburg's beach costume of yellow jersey with which she wore clogs. Mrs. Ledlie W. Young looked ever so jaunty in a navy blue beret, blue jersey pajamas, and a gay sweater.

An interesting date to mark on your early spring calendar is March 27, the date Alice Townsend de Peyster, daughter of the Frederic Ashton de Peysters, of Park avenue, New York, has chosen for her wedding to James Todd Jr., son of Mrs. James Todd, of Sewickley.

To Marry March 27

The marriage will take place that afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. James, Episcopal Church, New York. A reception in the de Peyster home will follow for the two families, relatives and a few intimate friends.

SOCIETY WOMEN MODELING SPRING CLOTHES

Arnold Junior Students To Give Play March 15

More than usual interest is being manifested in the production, March 15, of "Master Jacob," a three-act play by Howard Pyle by students of the Arnold Junior School, South Braddock avenue. The cast ranges from 9 to 13, and this is the first time they have attempted anything beyond a one-act play. A. Cameron Mann is directing.

The cast: Ralph Robinson, Kennedy Smith, Thompson Metzger, Harold Blaxter, Webster Jones, Robert Youngman, Jack Chresley, Benjamin Youngman and Jack Busman.

D.A.R. Requested to Help Survey on Old Buildings

Mrs. William Jackson Crittenden, regent of Pittsburgh Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has asked the members to co-operate with the Western Pennsylvania Architectural Survey recommended by the Historical Society in obtaining data regarding old buildings. Chapter members also are asked to attend the mass meeting for better government in Syria Mosque tomorrow evening.

Miss Grace Ryall Chooses May 3 For Wedding

Following the informal trend of the times, weddings this spring are for the most part small home ceremonies with usually just the families present.

Miss Grace Elinor Ryall, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Ryall, of Clearview avenue, Crafton Heights, has chosen May 3 as the date for her marriage to John Edward Hartman, of Vinceton street, North Side. She is to have no attendants and the wedding will be in her home.

Mr. Hartman and his bride will make their home in Pittsburgh after their honeymoon.

Finishing School Girls Home for Vacation Soon

Spring vacation is close at hand for some of the finishing-school daughters of Pittsburgh. And their youth will be a refreshing addition to social gatherings for their stay here.

From Miss Madeira's School in Washington will come Gladys Over, Louise Evans, Peggy Eastell, Anne Edmondson and Florence Willock, Mary Stoner, Sally Odell and Nancy Clause. They'll arrive March 24, it's expected.

From Farmington on March 15 will come Ruth Brooks, Jean Rose, May Richards, Betty Cappeau, Laura Liggett and Eleanor Painter.

Jane Kennedy, Frani Blough and Grace Rea will arrive from Vassar March 24, and so will Peggy Leiper, Charlotte Davis and Helen Robinson. The same day Elizabeth Bowman, Peggy Hamilton and Constance Murdoch will return from Swarthmore.

Missionary to Speak On Federation Hour

A mission 1,200 miles from Shanghai will be described by the Rev. Paul Ubinger, missionary to China, during the radio hour sponsored by the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women at 3:45 o'clock tomorrow.

THE NEW SPRING COATS GUARD AGAINST HIDDEN COLD SPELLS

DRESSMAKERS NEVER forget those between-season weeks — and even full-season days—when the weather turns suddenly cold. They make a special effort to provide the kind of spring coats that will not cause women to be taken unawares, in light woolen or even silk things, by a sudden blast of forgotten winter which may appear in the middle of the spring months.

THERE ARE many features of smartness about these coats, to add to their virtues of utility. They are usually slim and svelte, making the figure take on more slender lines; and because of their huge fur collars they make shoulders look wider, and, in consequence, hips thinner. Often as not they are accompanied by spring versions of the muff—which are really not muffs at all, but fur purses, flat and slim, but with slashes at the sides so that, in a pinch, they may serve as hand-warmers.

THE TWO mid-season coats in today's sketch are specially noticeable for their adroit use of furs. The coat at the left, of wool velvet, in a dark beige, has for its collar, cuffs and fur bag, brown or natural-colored seal. The wide arm-eyes, the broad sleeves and cuffs and the clever widened draping of the collar all contribute to a slenderness of line throughout the body.

THE OTHER coat, of mottled grey tweed, wraps well around the figure and fastens directly under the left arm. Its big collar is of red fox.

Women to Back Manager Bill In Capital

A large delegation of women, led by the Allegheny County League of Women Voters, expect to be in Harrisburg Tuesday when the State Senate opens its hearing on the Harris city manager bill.

In addition to attending the Senate hearing scores of women are writing their representatives in the House and Senate asking their support for the Harris legislation.

Attorney E. O. Tabor will address a meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. W. Mudge, Fifth and Morewood avenues. Mrs. J. O. Miller, chairman of the county government committee of the League, is the principal speaker at a meeting in Herbert DuPuy's home, Morewood avenue, today.

Home, Loyalty Stressed At Meeting of B. P. W.

The old-fashioned virtues of home, love, children, truth and loyalty were stressed by H. S. Metcalfe, speaking on "A Quest for the Permanent in an Age of Change" at the Wilkinsburg Business and Professional Women's dinner last night. It was the club's celebration of National Business Women's Week and was attended by 150 persons, among whom were representatives of 27 social and civic organizations of the borough.

Also on the program were Will Rhodes and his daughter, Mrs. Donald L. Hankey, who sang, accompanied by Mrs. LeRoy Bushnell. Copies of "The Tattler," the junior paper, were distributed.

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

An amusing scene at the Junior League fashion show yesterday in the Twentieth Century Club—scores and scores of late comers carrying chairs from the card room to the foyer outside the already full dining room where the models were displaying the latest thing for spring.

Smart society women, laden down with all sorts of bulky packages, arriving at the exclusive Twentieth Century Club for the show. The price of admission was a bundle of rummage, all to be sold at the Junior League Thrift Shop, Penn avenue.

I saw one woman with a dress under one arm and a pair of shoes under the other!

One of the hats modelled by Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby—a large, droopy brown straw affair, had regular garden decorations, including brown chenille suggesting worms!

Mrs. Jacoby was carrying the hugest hat box I've ever seen with a supply of new spring chapeaux that would fill any woman with envy—picturesque affairs with cherry and flower and feather trimming.

They reminded one a bit of our grandmothers' hats, stored away in the attic, except that the decoration was used with artistic restraint unknown in that day.

Mrs. J. Farley Walton, one of the spectators, was wearing one of the new mannish black felts. I saw her the other day in a similar hat, only of brown felt, with a monogram—R. M. W.—for Rachel Mellon Walton, of course.

DOCTORS ARGUE GROUP PLAN HOSPITALS

The advantages and disadvantages of group plan hospital socialization, submitted in the first report of the National Committee on the Costs of Medical Care, were discussed at the Tenth Councillor District, Medical Society of Pennsylvania, yesterday in Hotel Schenley.

The majority report, outlined by Dr. Manuel Elmer, of the University of Pittsburgh, answered objections to the plan advanced by Dr. George E. Follansbee, Cleveland, a member of the national committee.

Dr. Elmer, professor of sociology, cited the difficulties of persons with incomes less than $2,000 yearly in obtaining medical care. Declaring the majority report does not seek to have physicians work without fee, Dr. Elmer held it was unfair that patients who do and can pay should bear the loss entailed through free service.

Through socialization in group clinics, medical service should be provided by organized doctors, dentists, nurses and public health interests, Dr. Elmer said. The speaker limited his remarks to recommendations of the report.

Dr. Follansbee, upholding the first minority report, contended group plans defeat the purpose of reducing medical costs. Maintaining a staff of specialists when 85 per cent of patients suffer only trivial ailments was declared costly.

The patient would lose individuality and become a case number, thereby losing advantages of personal attention now available, Dr. Follansbee said. He asserted physicians would become employes of groups organized for money purposes and consequently would lack incentive to study and advance.

3 REDS HELD AS ALIENS

Three suspected Communists, alleged to have been distributing circulars announcing a mass meeting tonight to celebrate International Women's Day in Trade Union Hall, 1524 Fifth avenue, were turned over to immigration authorities in Central Police Court today.

The three—Philip Frankfeld, 326 Dinwiddie street; Lawrence Calhoun, 1741 Our way, and Ben Getty, 2207 Center avenue—were arrested in the Hill district last night, detectives testified, as they were about to enter an automobile containing the circulars.

Tonight's planned meeting, under auspices of the Pittsburgh District Committee of the Communist party, police said, was to discuss the role of women in the "working class struggle."

Man Held in Raid On Rum Storehouse

Arrested by federal prohibition agents who raided an alleged liquor storage building at 36 Hamilton avenue, Greensburg, Joe Policastro, Jr., 27, was held for court under $1,000 bond by the United States Commissioner today.

The agents reported seizure of 50 cases of whisky, four 52-gallon barrels of whisky, five cases of gin, 40 gallons of alcohol, seven five-gallon bottles of whisky, an electric apparatus for ageing whisky, strip stamps and labels. Policastro was charged with possessing liquor and material designed for the manufacture of liquor.

DISPLAYS RARE WOOD CARVING

A piece of the Allegheny National Forest, fantastically carved, is attracting the attention of passers-by to the window of Vincent Rizzo's restaurant, 1601 Broadway avenue, Beechview.

His cousin, Frank Folino, gave him the unusual carving, lives in Kane, Pa., on the edge of the forest. He has fashioned five pieces of soft pine into a model chandelier. Thirteen wooden balls roll freely in wooden cages. As many as nine separate pieces were cut out of a single piece of wood and left connected in the form of a wooden chain.

Mrs. Adele Loyal, Negro, 24, of 1404 Ridge avenue, was acquitted by a jury today of a murder charge in the slaying of Lulu May Owens, Negro, 30, of 939 Pollney street, alleged operator of a crap game. Testimony showed that the Owens woman went to Mrs. Loyal's home to warn her not to interfere with her business after the latter had protested losses by her husband in games at the Owens place. In an argument Mrs. Loyal, who weighs 110 pounds, fatally stabbed the Owens woman, weighing 220 pounds, with a paring knife, testimony disclosed.

Panhandlers Get Autographs in Dimeless Times

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

NEW YORK, March 8.—We did very well last night without a dime in cash money.

We got into Radio City on a check indorsed by 200 Roxy ushers.

We ate in Billy La Hiff's tavern and signed the tab. Jack Spooner, the waiter, was tipped with a slow draft on a bank in Egypt.

We were stopped by a panhandler on Broadway. After a short conference we exchanged autographs. He walked away humming softly to himself.

A taxicab drived accepted a cancelled Pullman check we had left over from the inauguration. The milkman was easy and was knocked off by our police card.

It takes a situation like this to make everybody happy and clubby. We have always claimed that you didn't know who your real friends were until they appeared against you in court.

GAS RATE GROUP KEEPS UNITY

D. Glenn Moore, of Washington, Pa., president of the Utilities League of Municipalities, today said a move to split the organization has failed. The league has a membership representing 450,000 residents of 35 municipalities who are waging war on alleged high rates and "adulterated" natural gas supplied by the Manufacturers Light and Heat Company. He added that the Councils of Ellwood City and New Castle have refused a request of the company for renewal of rate parleys.

Additional support to the league has been pledged by an organization representing 40 gas consumers near McMurray and 800 users in Graysville, Barnsville and West Alexander.

RACE TO DETAIN DEATH SUSPECT

INDIANA, Pa., March 8.—(AP.)—Indiana County authorities raced today to reach Harlan, Ky., in a second effort to return Jesse Hayes, 26, for trial on a charge of murder.

At the very hour a grand jury indicted Hayes late yesterday, Judge H. H. Howard is reported to have ruled in Harlan that Hayes is to be released tomorrow unless proper detention papers reach there.

The indictment was rushed to Harrisburg today by William M. Ruddock, district attorney, for Gov. Pinchot's signature on extradition papers. It charges Hayes shot John Bellas, 39, of Heshbon, to death on November 28, 1930, during an argument about alleged attention Hayes had paid Bellas' 15-year-old daughter.

A month ago today, Gov. Ruby Laffoon, of Kentucky, rejected a previous requisition of Gov. Pinchot to extradite Hayes. Hayes was said to have testified he shot in self defense, and his blind, aged mother, also pleaded for him, at the hearing in Frankfort.

ASSAIL COUNTY CONTRACT

The Electrical Contractors' Association of Pittsburgh has challenged legality of two contracts recently awarded by County Commissioners for erection of a greenhouse in South Park, at a cost of approximately $9,000, with Arnold & Sherger Company doing the foundation work and the Lord & Burnham Company completing the range or glasswork.

In a letter to the Commissioners, attorneys for the association contend that the county should have made separate contracts for the plumbing, heating and electrical work inasmuch as the county code says this must be done when public buildings are erected at a cost of more than $1,000.

County solicitors have held that the Commissioners were within their rights to award the work in general contracts, as the greenhouse could not be considered a public building.

MOTOR OFFICIAL HITS RAILROADS

Railroads have themselves to blame for their present plight, according to Robert P. Page, Jr., of Philadelphia, president of the Autocar Company, speaking last night at a meeting of the Pittsburgh chapter of the Pennsylvania Motor Ttruck Association in the office of the Autocar Sales and Service Company, Baum boulevard. He said:

"The railroads are the most inefficient big business in the United States today. They have not made one fundamental improvement in the last 50 years. The flood of propaganda released by them against the trucks is ridiculous."

The retiring president of the Pittsburgh chapter, John A. Harrison, was chairman of the meeting, which was attended by 450 truck operators and dealers.

DOT ELLINGSON TRIES SUICIDE

SAN FRANCISCO, March 8.—(AP.)—Dorothy Ellingson, 24, arraigned here on a charge of grand theft, was found unconscious in her gas-flooded room yesterday. A hose led from an open gas jet to her mouth. She was given emergency treatment and physicians said she would recover.

Miss Ellingson, released from San Quentin prison a year ago after serving almost seven years for the slaying of her mother, came here several weeks ago from Seattle and found employment in an attorney's office.

Early Sunday she was arrested on complaint of a former roommate, Miss Marf Ellis, who charged the theft of $560 worth of jewelry and clothing. A preliminary hearing on the grand theft charge was set for Saturday.

Jean Harlow, Barrymore Teamed

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, March 8.—That best-seller of 1897, "The Christian," is to be made into a talkie, co-starring the ultra-modern Jean Harlow and the ironic John Barrymore.

Refilming of the famous Hall Caine novel will be undertaken by David O. Selznick as one of the early pictures under his new associate producer contract at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

This announcement should stir memories for thousands of motion picture fans who were thrilled by the book and who remember the silent version of the story made by the Goldwyn company in 1923. Then it was Richard Dix who played the stern young preacher and Mae Busch who portrayed the self-willed heroine. Samuel Goldwyn sent the company all the way to London to get authentic background, and the picture was one of the important releases of the year.

Miss Harlow

Though there'll be no London trip this time, Dave Selznick also plans to make the new version into a big picture.

And take it from El Brendel, even the panhandlers on Vine street are taking checks these days.

The most disappointed couple in Hollywod Saturday were Helen Collins, niece of Austin Parker, and Lou Brock, comedy head at RKO. They were to have been married, but the legal holiday closed the marriage license bureau and the ceremony had to be postponed.

The film crowd is laughing at a comedy of errors which took place at a theater the other evening. Frank Atkinson, Fox actor, looks very much like Ely S. Culbertson. So much so, in fact, that Jack Warner mistook him for the bridge expert, greeted him cordially and asked him how his pictures were getting along. Atkinson, who has not played leads, was both surprised and charmed at such notice. The routine went on for several minutes before the mistake was discovered. Atkinson, by the way, is something of a celebrity himself. He shot down 20 German Planes during the war.

When Diana Wynyard goes to London in May, Sally Blane will go along ...Odd, the case of William Duffy. He has been a guard on a sound stage for two years at Fox, but never saw a scene shot until last week. The doors on the Fox stages open out, and the guards stand outside. Duffy's chance came when the Janet Gaynor company went to Warners' for a day. Over there, the doors open inward . . . The Jean Hersholts are planning a trip to Denmark before long. Real folks, the Hersholts. They have one of the homiest houses in Hollywood. Jean practically lives in his library, surrounded by his first editions, with a radio in arm's reach of his favorite chair and a big box of cigars on the massive desk. Cosmopolitan groups, all interesting people, gather at the Hersholt home. Dining there the other evening were the Harry Lachmans, the Erich von Stroheims, the James Campbells and the Lawrence Grants. Talk sparkled.

Here's something in Hollywood. A club of young folks (Tom Brown is president, Anita Louise is vice president), go Dutch when they spend an evening at a cafe. They also meet for very simple parties at the homes of the members. Some others in the club are Rochelle Hudson, Patricia Ellis, Patricia Ziegfeld, Helen Mack and Eric Linden. William Janney belonged when he was out here.

More than 10 years ago, a picture called "The Restless Sex" started production in the Fort Lee studio in New Jersay. The star of this film was Marion Davies, the director Robert Leonard and the property man Jimmy Sweeney.

Today in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, a picture called "Peg O'My Heart," is being made. The star is Marion Davies, the director Robert Leonard and the property man Jimmy Sweeney.

Bob Leonard has directed many of this star's films and Sweeney has been her property man from the first.

Film Declared Sensation

"Gabriel Over the White House," sensational Cosmopolitan picture, was completed last Friday in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Hollywood, and was immediately pre-viewed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Cosmopolitan executives in addition to several film trade paper critics. W. R. Wilkerson, editor and publisher of the Hollywood Reporter, in the current issue of that paper, gives it the most remarkably lauditory review ever accorded a motion picture. Under his own signature and the heading "Gabriel! A Sensation — Greatest Piece of Theatrical Property Industry Has Ever Known. Will Be the Talk of the World," Mr. Wilkerson writes:

"The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Cosmopolitan production of 'Gabriel Over the White House' will probably go down in the history of motion pictures as the most sensational piece of film entertainment the world has ever known and, as such, will attract more people to the box offices of America's theaters than any motion picture of the present age."

Broadways Of the World — All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

SHEPHEARD'S HOTEL, CAIRO, Egypt.—It was cool this evening when I stepped from the hotel. Cool enough, in fact, to wear a topcoat. I was glad of that because it gave me the opportunity to turn up my collar and look just a little less like a tourist. That meant that, instead of 50 dragomen and phony guides annoying me, perhaps only 10 of them would accost me.

I felt good as I strolled along. The air was just cool enough to give you a certain exhilaration. With my coat collar up, I was permitted a certain amount of peace. True, when I reached the right side of the main thoroughfare, I was surrounded by a number of men who leaped out with canes, sun glasses, small rugs and fake jewelry of every description. But I waded through them successfully and marched on.

Machines whirled by with an incessant honking of horns that makes Cairo's main street one of the noisest avenues in the world. Large carriages rolled by, propelled by the finest horses I've even seen. The bigger stores had their windows lighted. And the bargains, the signs insisted, "would never be offered again." The same signs are used each year during the big season.

Representatives of practically all nations could be spotted among the evening strollers. Mostly English, of course, but the French not far behind. Here and there, an American. And there and here, a German or an Italian. Mix with several Japs, one or two Chinamen, some stray Russians, many Egyptians and quite a few Greeks—and you behold Cairo in season.

I was enjoying myself—even going so far as to whistle a trifle for the first time in months—when the creature stepped up to me. I can't dignify him by calling him a man, so we'll have to stick to the creature angle.

"You want go to dance, mister? he whined. "Want to see big lot nice pretty lady? You follow me, mister. Only fifty cent, your money."

They will tell you all through Cairo that these mugs are harmless and that the police must tolerate them for some reason or other.

So, taking the advice that had been handed to me, I kept walking. With the advice went the statement that, after a block or so, they grow discouraged and leave you. But my man had evidently neglected to learn that particular portion of the assertion. For he kept walking and whining—whining and walking.

"You follow me, mister," he cried. "You get big surprise."

He stopped abruptly. And then followed one of the most amazing episodes I ever witnessed in all my career. Up the street came a tall man, very well dressed, who carried in his hand a gorgeous red rose with a long stem.

As he neared me, the man with the rose nodded to the filthy creature at my side. The latter darted forward and received the rose in a hand that was eagerly outstretched. The tall man said nothing. He merely walked on past me with an expression of having done a kind deed.

For the first time since he had seen me, the creature ignored me completely. Gone were all his whines of salesmanship. Mumbling a few words that I could not distinguish, he veered abruptly to the right. Inhaling deeply of the flower, he walked on and soon was lost in the crowd.

I walked on—and the more I walked, the more puzzled I became.

Passing a drug store that I had patronized on several previous occasions, I stepped in to replenish my supply of toothpaste. The proprietor is an Egyptian who was educated in the United States—and a highly interesting character he is, too.

"Well," I remarked as he was wrapping up my order, "I've got the same complaint again. It's almost impossible to walk the streets without being annoyed on every side. A few policemen could settle the entire trouble in no time. Why don't they stop this nonsense once and for all?"

He smiled.

"Probably," he returned, "it is because they do not want to stop it. In former years, it was far worse than it is now. They tamed it down somewhat, but they are unwilling to go too far. It is the theory of the police, I think, that these men have the right to make a living in any way that they see fit."

As the druggist talked, I was suddenly reminded of my experience.

So I told him the whole yarn, beginning with the time that I was first approached by the creature. Then I brought in the tall man with the rose. I described the transfer of the flower and the look on the tall man's face.

"And with that," I finished, "the filthy mug forgot me entirely. Pressing the rose to him, he disappeared. If that wasn't a queer thing, I don't know what a queer thing is. What the devil do you make of it?"

He gave me the solution without the slightest hesitancy.

"The answer is extremely simple," he replied with a shrug. "The rose was filled with dope." . . .

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

In the next two attractions in the Nixon, "Of Thee I Sing," and "The Green Pastures," Pittsburgh will be seeing works of two of its celebrated sons who formerly collaborated most successfully in turning out plays for the New York Market. These are George S. Kaufman, who, with Morris Ryskind, wrote the book "Of Thee I Sing," and Marc Connelly, author of "The Green Pastures." Kaufman and Connelly together wrote "Dulcy," which first made us fall in love with Lynn Fontanne, "To The Ladies," "Merton of the Movies," "Helen of Troy, New York," and "Beggar On Horseback. Mr. Kaufman was born in Pittsburgh while McKeesport is the native spot of Marcus Cook Connelly. Both began writing as newspaper men, Mr. Connelly here and Mr. Kaufman in Washington. To make the Pittsburgh angle more complete one of the stars of "Of Three I Sing," Lois Moran, is a Pittsburgh girl. Her first appearance on an American stage was in a Marc Connelly play, "The Wisdom Tooth," in New York. Previously she had danced in Paris opera for two seasons and she returned to France to appear in movies. Her first American film production was as the star of "Stella Dallas," a Samuel Goldwyn production. The public sale of seats for "Of Thee I Sing," which co-stars Miss Moran, Victor Moore and William Gaxton, will open tomorrow.

Marc Connelly's latest play, for which we have been waiting for three seasons,, "The Green Pastures," will come to the Nixon the week of March 26, and Manager Harry Brown announces that mail orders will be filled in order of receipt. Like "Of Thee I Sing," "The Green Pastures" also is a Pulitzer prize play. The cast is the original as far as it has been possible to keep it intact, with Richard B. Harrison in the role of "the Lawd," which he created on Broadway and which he has played more than 1,000 times. He made his stage debut at the age of 66, never having been in any other play.

The Dracomtra Players of the South Hills announce postponement of the date of presentation of the comedy "The Boomerang," originally to have been given tomorrow and Friday nights in the Fellowship Hall of Mt. Lebanon Baptist Church, Dormont. The production will be presented two weeks later, March 23 and 24.

Six groups of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players will present as many one-act plays in competition Saturday evening, and the three considered best will be given as a program for members of the settlement Sunday evening, March 19. The I. K. S. Players will participate in the anual play contest of the Drama League, to be held in the Theresa L. Kaufmann auditorium, for the third successive year, April 25, 26, 27 and 28.

Hereafter Katharine Cornell, star of "Alien Corn," now playing in New York, will exact payment from autograph hunters. The fee will be 50 cents, the money to be given to the Actors' Fund of America, a long established theatrical charity.

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

This bank situation has brought many letters concerning scrip money. Virginia Myers, of Franklin avenue, Wilkinsburg, says that scrip money will be no novelty to her. She has scrip saved as far back as 1863 and 1864. I hasten to add that it was handed down to Miss Myers and that she was not on the scene at those dates.

Dorothy Green, of Sherman avenue, dates her scrip a little farther back—1820—and even as far back as 1767; which at that time was issued under an act of the Assembly of Maryland.

"Who paid the expense of the Presidential inauguration at Washington?" is the question asked by A. E. Sillaman, of McKeesport.

As far as the radio program is concerned—that was picked up by the network as a public service, and no charge was made to the government. The expenses of the inaugural ball were met by a sale of tickets, any profit going to charity. The stands along the street and decorations are paid for by the people of Washington, hotel men, businessmen, etc. Expenses incident to stated formalities are met by the Government, but this constitutes a negligible amount.

Some European nations have the custom of putting their Prime Ministers on a pension, and some think that maybe that is why Prime Ministers are changed so often over there, but here our ex-President receives no remuneration from his government.

Big Networks 'Standing By' For U. S.

By AIRCASTER

A bit of radio history was made by the major networks agreeing to observe a self-imposed ban on all "unofficial" discussions of the financial situation.

While the move was not official, it took the shape of an agreement between government officials and the network executives that no speakers with messages concerning the banking situation would be permitted to go on the air unless ordered or approved by the administration.

It was further agreed that the networks be available to the President or his spokesman at any hour when it is deemed advisable to broadcast an official emergency message to the listening public.

The understanding between the President and the radio officials followed an avalanche of requests by governors, lawyers, statesmen and bankers, both radical and conservative, to take the air with messages to the American people. The Washington studios of both networks seethed with such would-be orators, and in New York there were similar applications.

News of these requests were referred to President Roosevelt, and a conference followed, which resulted in the understanding that only administration-inspired speakers be given air time on official request. The President, who has full authority under the existing radio law to take over all air facilities in an emergency, let it be known that he might wish to use the broadcasting facilities freely this week to help restore public confidence and explain the involved processes for straightening out the banking situation.

George Olsen will be deprived of Ethel Shutta's talents when he opens March 15 with Fanny Brice. But Ethel, so I am told, is to have her own 15-minute sustaining spot on the same network.

Al Jolson won't go on that Reisman program, as previously announced, because it has been found unfeasible to employ a special orchestra for him on the West coast.

NUMBER MAN'S PAROLE LAID TO OVERSIGHT

Dominic Cinquegrani, admitted Squirrel Hill numbers operator, had chalked up another parole to his credit today, thankful—possibly—that a clerk overlooked an old record card when he was arraigned for sentence.

Cinquegrani was paroled for a year late yesterday and ordered to pay costs after he had entered a plea of guilty to conducting a lottery November 30, at 2130 Murray avenue, before Visiting Judge Norman T. Boose.

Assistant District Attorney Chauncey Pruger, the prosecutor, noting the papers in the case were marked "records," had dispatched a messenger to the probation office for these documents.

CLERK BRINGS ONE CARD

The clerk came back with one card, revealing that last spring Sinquegrani had been found guilty of operating a lottery and had been fined $25 and costs. His charges at that time that Former City Detectives Robert Burke and James Noon had hired him to sell lottery tickets were not substantiated.

The messenger, it developed later, had overlooked a soiled record card disclosing that in 1922 Cinquegrani had been paroled on a robbery charge. Later the oversight was discovered and the card sent to the court.

THE PROSECUTOR EXPLAINS

Today Assistant Prosecutor Pruger, asked about the missing card, said:

"I know nothing of any record showing Cinquegrani paroled on a robbery charge."

Judge Boose said:

"I had all the records in the case before me when sentence was pronounced. Final disposition has not been made. In imposing a one year parole the court's intention was to keep Cinquegrani out of the numbers racket. If he goes back into it, he will be called in and sentenced to serve the year."

Court attaches, questioned, said they were of the opinion the second record card had not been discovered when Cinquegrani was ordered paroled.

Kramer .....Silhouette (Viennese Waltz)

The String Symphonic Ensemble of Pittsburgh with Oscar Del Bianco conducting gave another recital last night in Carnegie Lecture Hall before quite a large audience. The program was too long and could easily have omitted all the Grieg and the Kramer, even the immeasurably dull Dvorak, without harm to the rest of the music.

Mr. Lissfelt

High lights of the evening were the Tschaikowsky and Levenson works. In the "Serenade," especially during that fine "sonatina" and the "Elegie" the ensemble reached a high water mark in its career. With tone almost as large as orchestral volume and yet within the range of excellent taste the players gave us climaxes that were astonishing as they were beautiful.

The two Levenson numbers were originally written for violin and piano and have been scored for string ensemble especially for the Pittsburgh players. One hearing of these charming pieces—even if the program had remained silent about Levenson's teacher—would have suggested Rimsky-Korsakoff, for they abound in memories of "Schenerazade" and "Le Coq d'Or." They are, nevertheless, richly scored, especially in the woodwind section, are melodically attractive, and lent much to last night's program.

FRED LISSFELT.

POLITICS

Oliver Backing Held Herron Strategy

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, March 8.—Support of George S. Oliver for the councilmanic vacancy created by the resignation of M. J. Muldowney to take his seat in Congress is acclaimed in Harrisburg as a smart political move by President of Council John S. Herron and Senator James J. Coyne in preparation for the mayoralty primary of next September.

It is unquestioned that Herron wishes to be a candidate for Mayor. He has the support of the personal following he has built up, plus the assistance of the Coyne wing of organized politics in the Republican party. He will try to make the grade as a primary candidate with this backing, and now will seek to add such additional strength as can be secured through the affiliation of businessmen with Oliver.

The latter will be expected to veneer the Herron movement with a conservative business overtone, providing in addition the prestige of the memory of his father, the late Senator George T. Oliver. Thus Coyne and Herron reach out through Oliver for fields which under ordinary conditions would be closed to them.

Oliver May Become Mayoralty Alternate

Herron realizes, as does Coyne, that he must meet the objections raised because of the association between the President of Council and the Oakland senator. No one was more deeply affected, or more disturbed than Herron when Coyne at a caucus of the Republican members of the Allegheny County Legislative delegation opposed the resolution of Senator Frank J. Harris for an indorsement of the principle of clean elections, without specification of any legislation.

The President of Council reasoned that this would react against his mayoralty candidacy. Perhaps Oliver can act as a poultice and extract poisonous resentment from the public mind.

Further than this, if the preliminary to the primary campaign develop that Herron will meet such stout opposition from independent and business circles as to make his success problematical, Oliver can be thrust forward as an alternative mayoralty candidate.

Though the relations between Oliver and Senator Coyne have been quite as close as those between Herron and the Senator, the public generally is not aware of that fact. It classed Herron in the political catagory, despite his acknowledged ability in municipal affairs. It remembers that he stood with Mayor Kline against investigation of the incidents which led to the mayor's indictment and conviction, breaking definitely only at the time of budget making in December of last year.

Herron to Profit By Oliver Support

It does not associate Oliver with Senator Coyne so definitely. It does not have as a settled conviction the knowledge that the political faction led by Oliver, which gradually dwindled, was ultimately bequeathed to Senator Coyne when Oliver retired as a de facto as well as de jure political leader a few years ago.

On the remnants of this Senator Coyne built through extensions until his scope extended far beyond the confines of the Fourth Ward.

Furthermore, the public probably will pay little attention to these past incidents. It will think of Oliver primarily as a member of a respected Pittsburgh family, a family identified with the business and civic growth of the community. It will also think of Oliver as a brother of A. K. Oliver, a former member of Council, and a leader in the civic and welfare work of the city. It will recall that A. K. Oliver was and is active in the Red Cross, the Welfare Fund and Emergency Relief, just having been appointed Allegheny County chairman of the state board.

All of this will be velvet to Herron. It will link him with forces which have no connection with partisan or factional politics.

Little Opposition To Oliver Expected

It is generally expected at the City-County Building that George S. Oliver will have little opposition when Council and the Mayor vote on a successor to Michael J. Muldowney, who resigns from Council today to take his seat in Congress.

The four members of the Herron-Coyne group are in line for Oliver, and one of the independents, Councilman Robert Garland, has announced that he will vote for him. Mayor Charles H. Kline has not expressed a preference.

The election is expected to take place at the regular meeting of Council Monday. A plea for a special meeting Thursday was abandoned to permit notification of Councilman W. Y. English, who has been ill in Texas.

The name of John D. Houston, who started the Supplies Department investigation, which led to the sentencing of Mayor Kline and his deposed supplies director, Bertram L. Succop, has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the job.

Councilmen P. J. McArdle and Charles Anderson of the independent bloc have not announced for Oliver and it is believed they may throw their votes to Houston.

Traffic Relief Seen In Work on Circle

Traffic relief at the circle at the north end of the Liberty Tubes may be expected from the cutting back of the circle, according to City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre.

Counts have shown that during a 10½-hour business day 28,656 vehicles cross paths at this busy intersection.

FLEES HOSPITAL IN NIGHT SHIRT

Unless he obtained shelter and clothing after he fled from the Allegheny General Hospital, James Millerest, 23, was wandering about in a snowstorm today clad in a hospital nightshirt.

Since they had received no reports of a person so scantily dressed being sighted, police assumed Millerest had found shelter.

The young man, held since he was beaten and arrested in a Communist demonstration downtown Saturday, escaped from the hospital early today, according to police. Two nurses were said to have seen him in the street, and reported his escape. Police radio crews were put on his trail, but he still was at large late today.

Patients in the ward from which Millerest fled said an immigration officer questioned him yesterday. He gave his address as the Helping Hand. He was suffering from head injuries and wore bandages when he left the hospital.

SPORT COMMENT

RUNNING MATE FOR FRENCH LOOMING

THERE HAS BEEN no greater demand for material of any other sort in the big baseball leagues this off-season than for left-hand pitchers. And while other clubs were scouring the country and bidding against one another for promising portsiders, it looks as though Pittsburgh grabbed off one of the best bets in the entire new crop when the Pirate management quietly stepped in and purchased the release of Ralph Birkofer, last year with Tulsa and Kansas City, for which teams he won 17 games while losing 11.

Ralph Birkofer

Local fans are too experienced to accept early spring showings by new recruits as proof of major league fitness, but Birkofer's work must be termed very encouraging, at least. He looked good in the preliminary drills, and he looked even better in the first practice game, when he held the Yanigans to one hit in four innings, besides personally contributing a ringing three-bagger that won the decision for the Regulars. The new lefty has loads of stuff, and has the size to back it up. If he has the heart and the head, the rest will come with experience.

MANAGER GIBSON predicted at the start that a lot would be heard about this husky rookie, 23 years old and weighing 195 pounds, and from all indications he had the right dope. The Pittsburgh club has needed another fork-hander, and there is at least a chance that Birkofer will prove the man to fill the bill.

There will be less worry among the fans now over the case of Charley Wood, the other candidate for the second southpaw berth on the Pirate staff, whose chances of making good appear still to be impaired by lack of control. Birkofer is not yet proved or established, by any means, but at any rate he has made a most promising start, and if he can crowd his way in he will make a real running mate for Larry French.

BROOKLYN REPORTS ITS first rookie sensation in Charley Sheerin, a young outfielder, who has been showing up so brilliantly as a fielder and thrower that Max Carey says he is as good as any gardener on the Dodger roster and ready for a big league job now—if he can hit.

That's the hitch. Sheerin never played a game of professional ball. After his scholastic and semi-pro days Brooklyn signed him for the Hartford farm, but a broken leg in the spring put him out, and when he recovered there wasn't any Hartford farm. So the chance of his being able to hit big league pitching is rather thin.

IT WAS ALMOST with tears in his eyes that Marty McManus, Red Sox manager, told Pitcher Pete Jablanowski one day last summer that he'd have to let him go. He was sending Pete to Newark in the International League in exchange for Johnny Welch and regretted that Jablanowski couldn't be kept on a big league job. Pete regretted it, too, but he didn't know how it was going to turn out. He won 11 out of 12 games for Newark, owned by the Yankees, and now the Yanks are bringing him up for another big league trial. He was fired off a tail ender and comes back with the world champioins. Sometimes in baseball they're being kicked upstairs when they least realize it.

Travis Jackson

WHILE MUCH WILL depend on the durability of Travis Jackson's repaired knee, the quality of the pitching, the strength of the opposition, and several other factors, Bill Terry will at least have tradition on his side in his efforts to lift the Giants to the first division this year.

For it is a matter of history that after a bad year, such as the season of 1932 when they finished in a tie with the Cardinals for sixth place, the Giants usually have rebounded. At any rate, that always was true of the club after John McGraw took hold of it in the middle of the race of 1902, jumping from the Baltimore team of the American League.

NEVER UNDER M'GRAW did the Giants land in the second division two years in succession. They wound up in the second flight only three times while John J. was in command of the outfit, and after each slip they jumped right back to a place among the first four.

After a drop to the cellar in 1902, the New Yorkers rose to second position in 1903. They were last again in 1915, but the following season found them fourth. They finished fifth in 1926, but were third in 1927. So if they run true to custom they may return to the select set this year. But perhaps Terry isn't McGraw.

THE WINTER BOOKS on the Kentucky Derby are getting their annual play, proving that there still are some people willing to bet on anything, no matter how long the chance. There are 118 nominations for this year's Derby, but it's a safe guess that not more than 25, possibly not that many, will start on May 6. The future books are operated on a play-or-pay system. This means that if the horse you bet on doesn't start, you're out whatever money you wagered. Many of the Derby entries will go lame, and many others will be withdrawn because the owners know they have no chance.

BUT MEANTIME NUMEROUS bettors will take a chance and try to pick a horse in the hope that he will start and win and pay box car numbers. It's the bait of the long prices that draws them, when in fact some of the prices are not within miles of being long enough.

Many of the horses named in the winter book quotations ought to be priced at something like 5,000 to 1. But the turf commissioners have arranged their prices in such a way that no matter what horse wins the Derby the sponsors of the books are bound to win a certain amount of money.

WELKER COCHRAN, world three-cushion billiard champion, who played an exhibition match with Jay Bozeman in Tobin's Smithfield street billiard room last Friday and Saturday, is the most emphatic standout ever to appear here in the angle pastime, in the opinion of many local cue fans who watched him.

Among the dyed-in-the-wool Cochran boosters is Marty Welk, once claimant of the pocket billiard championship of Pennsylvania, who has seen them all at the three-rail sport over a long period. "Cochran," says Welk, "has everything. Of course, as Cochran has been both 18.1 and 18.2 balkline champion, his knowledge of all billiards is sound. But, unlike some other topnotch balkline experts, he has been able with ease to develop almost perfect control of a three-rail stroke. For a long time he should be a hard man to beat."

Marty Welk

WELK, INCIDENTALLY, IS taking a fling at a three-cushion championship himself. That is the Pittsburgh city title, for which play will open tonight in a tournament at Tobin's room. The competition has brought in the entries of nearly all of Pittsburgh's best angle players, including Dale Campbell, the present city champion; James Watson, William Kish, Grant Smith, John Lohr, Harry Schoeller, Pete Killmeyer and R. C. Davidson, the last named one of Chicago's best billiardists who recently transferred his business to Pittsburgh. Charley Black, veteran local billiard impressario, who is handling the tournament, has Tobin's new exhibition room fitted up with plenty of comfortable seats waiting for a big turnout of cue fans.

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 8.—The third and last squad game of the Pirate training season is scheduled for this afternoon. There will be no Regular-Yannigan contest tomorrow as the Buccos are slated to leave for San Francisco late in the afternoon.

Manager Gibson will give his rookie pitchers a chance to show their stuff this afternoon. He announced that Charley Wood, Jim Crandall, Earl Stoner and Homer Hurst would divide the work.

The first team came from behind yesterday to measure the Yans for a second defeat. The Yannigans went into the eighth inning with a one-run lead, but Steve Swetonic lost his control on the first two batters. Lindstrom went out on an infield by, but P. Waner and Pie Traynor came through with a couple of singles which sank the kids. The score was 3 to 2. The contest being called at the end of the eighth round.

HARRIS, SWIFT DUEL

Bill Harris and Bill Swift paired off in a slab duel in the first four rounds. Harris toiled for the Regulars while Swift tried slab duty for the Hooligans. Bill was so good he allowed only two hits, and the Yans were out in front, 1-0, when the Scranton boy left the contest.

Hal Smith and Swetonic were the two relief pitchers. The Regulars tied it up in the fifth largely on account of Arky Vaughan's three-bagger, but the Yans were happy in the first of the eighth when Fightin' Bill Brubaker singled with two out to score Woodie Jensen, who had doubled. It looked like curtains for the first team until Swetonic walked Smith at the start of the last of the eighth.

Boss Gibson played out his string as much as he would in a championship game. He sent in Charley Wood, a swifter runner, to run for Smith. L. Waner then walked. Thevenow camped under Lindstrom's lazy fly.

PIE'S BLOW WINS

P. Waner then pushed a rather lucky hit through short that scored Wood, L. Waner taking second. Up came Traynor to slap a hot single into right. This was the pay ball, L. Waner sprinting over on the blow.

Once again the pitchers seemed to have a lot of stuff on the ball and the action was speedy all the way.

Chillysauce

The Pirates have not been rained out since they landed here and as a result many of the players are near top condition.

There seemed to be a hint of rain in the skies last night. Even the Pirates are pulling for a downpour. For selfish reasons they are eager to see rain, but a bigger issue is the condition of local crops. The rainfall is much behind the normal figure.

There will be only one workout tomorrow. The Bucs are due to reach San Francisco late Thursday night. The Seals will be met on Friday.

(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE MOST DISTINGUISHED FAMILY IN MATHEMATICS—Johann Bernouilli (1744-1807), member of a family which was obliged to flee to Switzerland from their native Antwerp to escape religious persecution at the hands of the bloody Duke of Alba, was a precocious mathematical genius who was a doctor of philosophy and mathematics at the age of 13. The genius for mathematical learning was hereditary in the family. He was the son of Johann II; the father of Christopher and Nicholas; the brother of Jacques and Jerome; the grandson of Jacques and Nicolas; the cousin of Nicolas, Christopher and Johann; the nephew of Nicolas, Daniel and Jacques; and the great-grandson of Nicolas Bernouilli—every one of whom was a leading mathematician of his time. The history of the family is indeed a history of mathematical progress for three centuries, many mathematical discoveries being still named after the Bernouillis.

NORWIN DOWNS CONNELLSVILLE IN THRILLER

By JULIUS LEVIN

The field of contenders reduced to eight schools as a result of eliminations played in the first and second rounds, the W. P. I. A. L. basketball series enters the quarter-finals tonight when Monessen High, coached by Preston Ditty and champion of Section V, engages Ford City, coached by Neenie Campbell and champion of Section VI, in the Pitt Stadium pavilion.

The contest tonight brings together two quintets that barely survived their second-round engagements, both winning by a margin of a single point.

CECIL NOSED OUT

Ford City came through in the last five seconds to defeat a surprising Cecil aggregation, champion of Section XIV, by a 20-19 score. Cecil was leading, 19-18, as the timer raised his gun to end the contest, when Baynor, crippled Ford City star, dribbled under the basket and fired the winning field goal as the game ended.

Monessen's Greyhounds likewise were pressed to advance in the tournament, the Dittymen nosing out the Canonsburg Gunners, champions of Section XV, 24-23. Canonsburg was leading, 23-22, when Hughes, of Monessen, was fouled in the act of shooting. He made good on both charity shots to give the Greyhounds their 24-23 triumph.

The winner in tonight's game earns the right to engage Norwin, of Section XI, in a semi-final tilt on Monday, March 13, in the Pitt Stadium pavilion.

NORWIN WINS

Norwin last night eliminated Connellsville, representing Section X, in a thrilling battle on the Greensburg High School floor, 35 to 33, after two extra periods of battling.

Norwin got off to a good start and held a lead of two points at the end of the first half. This advantage stood up throughout the third period, but in the fourth Connellsville tied the score at 33-all. Connellsville was ahead, 33 to 32, but Connellsville took its fourth time out and Zavora, of Norwin, made good on the technical foul try to knot the count.

Neither team could count in the first of the overtime periods, but in the second, Madrick, Norwin guard, let fly with a long shot that swished through the net to bring his team the victory.

Foltz, Connellsville center, was the high point man of the game, with six field goals and three fouls for 15 points. Downey led for Norwin, scoring five goals and two fouls. The lineup:

Latimer overcame a one-point Fifth Avenue lead recorded in the first period to lead at 8 to 5 at the half. This advantage was boosted to 14 to 8 at the end of the third quarter and held good throughout the last. The lineup:

N. BELLE VERNON AHEAD

The junior W. P. I. A. L. championship for 1933 belongs to North Belle Vernon's scrappy team today. The North Belle Vernon passers defeated Duquesne, 18 to 16, last night on the Glassport floor in the championship final.

The visitors led, 9 to 7, at the end of the first half. This two-point advantage was whittled down to a single point as the fourth stanza got under way, but North Belle Vernon had the stuff to carry through the fourth quarter and take the title.

Kovac, Duquesne forward, with 10 points, was the high point star of the contest. He scored four field goals, as many as were rung up by the entire North Belle Vernon team. The lineup:

FAGAN BATTLES M'CLINTOCK

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Frank McClintock, veteran P. A. A. ace, battles Charley Fagan, talented K. A. C. performer, in the lone remaining quarter-final contest of the annual City Class B Squash Recquets title tourney at the Keystone Athletic Club at 5 p. m. today. Semi-final matches, wherein the survivor of this afternoon's encounter meets Champion McCook Reed, Pittsburgh Golf Club star, and Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, Winged Head contender, takes on Bill Bickel, home club hope, will be staged tomorrow, with final fracas listed for Saturday.

Reed and O'Loughlin achieved the semi-finals yesterday by respective triumphs over George Kepler, P. A. A. husky who last week annexed the City Class B crown, and over Chip Kennedy, Keystone luminary and 1932 Class B premier. Reed won, 18-17, 15-9, 15-10, and O'Loughlin beat Kennedy, 15-9, 18-16, 15-3. Bickel led the march to the bracket of four by dint of close decision over Joe Oliver, Golf Club stylist, last Saturday.

Meanwhile Chairman Dick Koubek of the Allegheny Mountain Association, A. A. U. senior handball championships announces that one of the strongest and most representative fields assembled here in many years will go to the post at the Keystone a week from next Friday. Singles competition gets under way on March 17, with doubles lining up for March 24. Koubek is receiving entries for both divisions. He may be reached by mail or telephone at the Keystone A. C.

SPORT VIGNETTES

No one was happier over the fine form displayed by Tony Herrera in his easy victory over Tony Falco at Motor Square Garden, Monday night, than his manager, Ray Alvis, of Chicago, just back from California, where he handled Jackie Fields in the bout in which the latter dropped the world welterweight title to Young Corbett III. . . . Alvis believes Herrera has regained his old flashy stride and is dreaming big things for the Mexican favorite.

For one thing, he would like to match him for a lightweight championship match with Tony Canzoneri, right here in Pittsburgh, at Forbes Field, this summer, and, for another, he stands ready to match him against our Ted Yarosz, leading lightweight, at 147 pounds . . . Tony would come in at around 140; he scaled 139 at 3 p. m., for Falco . . . In his Falco bout form, Herrera would figure to give Teddy the busiest night the Monaca citizen has known and might beat him by a decisive margin . . . Alvis also stands ready to send Fields against Yarosz . . . They were matched for a non-title bout at the Meyers Bowl early last summer, but Fields suffered an eye injury and the bout had to be canceled.

Ray Alvis

According to Alvis, Fields expects to clean up a lot of money before he hangs up the padded mittens and says farewell to his ring career . . . The bad eye, which cost him $12,000, including a trip to Vienna to see a specialist and a series of operations, stood the test well in the Corbett fight, Alvis says, and there is a possibility of a return match between the pair . . . A Fields-Jimmy McLarnin fight also is in the making in Los Angeles, and Jackie has two bouts he can grab in Boston, a Yarosz bout always will be good here, and he really thinks he will win the 147-pound title a third time.

So far as the bout with Corbett in San Francisco was concerned, Alvis says he thought Jackie won it, and a lot of other folks did, too . . . He says Fields, feeling he was on the spot, fought, to use his own words, "like a four-round preliminary fighter trying to make good in a big club." . . . That is to say, he was the aggressor all of the way . . . The referee awarded five rounds to Corbett, four to Fields and called one even and on this slender margin transferred the title . . . The San Francisco scribes, who felt all along that Corbett had got a pretty bad deal in being tossed around for three years in his bid for a championship match, concurred with the referee in the decision, but Los Angeles writers saw Fields as the real winner . . . Out of this difference of opinion may come another match.

Returning to Herrera, Alvis states his case quite logically in this manner: . . . "Tony has been a favorite here for four years . . . He's beaten everybody they've asked him to take on and always has pleased the fans, and Pittsburgh is by long odds his best fighting ground . . . Canzoneri, the champion, would be willing to fight Herrera if he could be sure of a good-sized crowd for the match, and I know of no more promising spot than right here . . . It could be a championship bout, and I think my Tony rates something like that . . . He can beat

Plan to Retire Denied by Hagen

MIAMI, Fla., March 8.—(INS.)—Walter Hagen, former British Open champion, has no intention of retiring from golf.

The veteran golfer, who this year will complete his twentieth year as a professional, received from International News Service a report that he intended retiring from the game after the 1933 season with much the same comment Mark Twain made at one time on his reported death. Hagen said:

TECH TRIUMPHS IN OVERTIME FRAY, 37-35

By JESS CARVER

The home town lads proved their mettle as basketballers and in the manly art of fisticuffing last night as varsity teams of Tech and Pitt turned back out of town opponents in thrilling and decisive manner.

The job that Tech had to handle was the toughest of the evening. It took the Tartans an extra period to subdue Geneva's crack Covenanter quintet, champion of the Tri-State Conference, 37 to 35. Pitt's Golden Panthers walloped poor old Wash-Jeff, 52 to 23, and the Panther boxers beat the Prexy punchers, 6 to 1, in an Intercollegiate Conference match.

TECH GAME THRILLER

The Tech-Geneva game was as thrilling as any that has been played here this season and marked Carnegie's second triumph of the year of extra-period brand. It also enabled the Tartans to split even with the Covenanters in the home-and-home series with the Genevians, who nosed out the Plaid at Beaver Falls a few pay-days ago.

Geneva was out in front, 19 to 12, at the end of the first half. Had it not been for Bob Smith, who tallied 10 of the 12 Tartan points, the margin would have been greater.

Carnegie lost little time in catching up with and then passing the visitors as the second half got under way and were ahead, 22 to 19, before Geneva even scored. Then Hymie Ginsburg put his team back into the ball game with a field goal.

Tech improved on its lead, however, and with less than two minutes to go, led by 29 to 27. Schmitz, Geneva's center, came through with a goal from under the hoop to tie the count and then topped another to give his team the lead with seconds to play, but Ted Fergus, up until this time a negative member of the Skibo brigade as far as scoring was concerned, put a lot of push and a prayer on the ball from the center line and in it went to knot the count at 31-31.

SILVERTIP' SCORES

Little George (Silvertip) Silverman gave Tech the edge as the extra period opened as he sent a long one plopping through the net. Ewalt followed with a sleeper under the hoop to make it 35-31, but Manning bagged one to make it 35-33 and keep his team in the ball game. Lou Jagnow, who hadn't even had a chance at a foul up until this time, got the ball in the clear under his own basket and hooked in the deciding goal, and just as the ball game ended, Cliff Aultman dribbled through the entire Tech defense to count again, though uselessly, for Geneva.

Smith was the big gun of the attack for Tech, accounting for a total of 14 points, six of 'em scored on fouls. In the preliminary, Theta Xi defeated the Skibo Pledges, 31-30. The lineup of the main game:

Carnegie	G.	F.	Pts.	Geneva	G.	F.	Pts.
Smith, f	4	6	14	Aultman, f	4	1	9

EASY FOR PITT

They tried out the abolishing of the center toss during the first half of the Pitt and Wash-Jeff game and Doc Carlson used his second and third stringers, both of which tended to keep the impotent Presidents within hailing distance of the Panthers. At the end of the first 20 minutes of action, Pitt led only by 18 to 13.

Rocco Cutri, who completes his varsity career at Pitt this year, was the big noise of the ball game. Rocco starred as a freshman four years ago, and then gave up basketball to devote his athletic talents to Dr. Sutherland's football squad. He was a honey last night, sinking eight field goals and a foul for 17 points.

Onlookers were divided as to the effectiveness of the departure from the center toss. Some were of the opinion it slowed down the game and others that it added speed thereto. The lineup:

Pitt	G.	F.	Pts.	W. & J.	G.	F.	Pts.

PANTHER MITTMEN WIN

By beating the Prexy boxers, the Pitt team moved into a tie for third place in the Intercollegiate Conference with Bucknell. Wash-Jeff forfeited in the 125, 135, 155 and 165-pound classes. Capt. Al Demedowitz won the only victory for the Red and Black, winning by a technical knockout in the second round over Joe Kopp, Pitt's 174-pounder. The summary:

Banks Closed, Ice Team Is Stranded

SAINT JOHN, N. B., March 8.—(AP.)—The Boston Hockey Club, stranded here by a ruling of the New England A. A. U., which suspended them and forbade games with organized teams, today had enough money to pay their hotel bills, but still were without sufficient currency to buy tickets home.

They played a 6-6 tie game with a team composed of Saint John and Sussex players last night, but the receipts were below expectations and barely covered expenses already incurred. Because of the bank holiday in the states they can get no funds from home.

Marston to Head New Links Body

NEW YORK, March 8.—(AP.)—The Handicap Golfers' Association, which plans a national tournament this year for the average club players, has announced formation of a permanent organization with Max Marston, of Philadelphia, former amateur champion, as president.

The early stages of the national tournament will be contested "by mail," each entrant playing over his own course within a specified time and mailing his scores with his club handicap to the national headquarters in New York. Sectional winners may be brought together at some central course for the final playoffs for the national title. Uniform handicapping rules will be sought.

Monte Munn Dies From Heart Attack

INDIANAPOLIS, March 8.—(AP.)—Monte Lee Munn, 32, former football star at the University of Nebraska, died here today following an attack of heart disease.

Munn became a heavyweight boxer for a time after being graduated. A brother, Wayne, for a time, held the heavyweight wrestling championship.

GARDEN TAKES IN $540 IN CHECKS

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Benny Bass vs. Joe Ghnouly and Jack McVey vs. Allen Matthews, 10 rounds each, and Chick Raines vs. Rosy (Kid) Baker, 8 rounds, St. Louis.

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

The Tony Herrera-Tony Falco fight at Motor Square Garden, Monday night, paid off on a little more than $1,600 net after the 10 per cent federal and 5 per cent state taxes had been deducted. And, of the gross sum, $540 was in checks cashed because of the banking emergency.

Just thought you might want to keep up to the minute on your finances.

Johnny Chiodo, of Johnstown, and Sammy Burns, local Negro featherweight, have been matched for the opening six-round bout at the Arena, on the North Side, Friday night, completing the bill. Three 10-rounders follow it, as follows: Jackie Davis vs. Jimmy Columbo, Georgie Riley vs. Frankie Wallace and Owen Phelps vs. Frankie Goosby.

BUNNY'S IN AGAIN!

A telephone call from Peter (The Great) Buntach, manager of Joe Marcus, He says:

"Thanks for printing that letter I left you about the promoters giving my Joe Marcus the runaround. My friends tell me it is one of the finest things they ever read in a newspaper. Only, as I read it now, it wasn't quite strong enough. When I wrote about Lew Raymond, I meant to say the very fat Lew Raymond, and when I mentioned Jules Beck I should have mentioned the fact that he no longer can part his hair in the middle.

"But what I called to say more than anything else is that the war is on. The war between myself and the promoters, all promoters and all matchmakers. I defy the matchmakers to get somebody—anybody—to lick my Joe Marcus, and, on behalf of Joe, who will do the fighting, I'll gladly concede anything up to 10 pounds, the Boxing Commission's limit between contestants.

"If the local matchmakers can't take advantage of such an offer and find somebody to beat Marcus, to whom they are giving a runaround, then they're not good matchmakers. And you can put a P. S. on that, saying I mean Jules Beck and Lew Raymond. If it were up to them, Marcus would go to his grave unbeaten, because he'd never get a chance to fight anybody."

TRIPLE WINDUP CARDED

The Garden expects to complete its card today for its show next Monday night, when it will offer three 10-rounders and a six-round bout. Jimmy Thomas meets Tommy Paul, recent N. B. A. featherweight champion, in the main event, and Battling Gizzy takes on Eddie Zivic in the semi-final.

NEW GOLF PLAN FAILS HERE

By TOM BIRKS

Western Pennsylvania golf officials apparently feel very apathetic toward the newly-formed Associated Golf Clubs body, a New England States organization for the exchange of golf privileges by players in the leading country clubs in the United States and Canada.

While the association has such national figures as Max Marston, Francis Ouimet and H. Chandler Egan on its advisory board, George Ormiston, secretary of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, said today he knew nothing of the organization, and, so far as he knew, no country club in the Pittsburgh district had been approached for membership.

PLAN OUTLINED

According to the circular letter released from the office of President Edward H. Baker, in Boston, selected clubs are invited to join without charge. Members of the associated clubs then may apply to their respective secretaries for a membership card upon payment of a fee. This card acts as a letter of introduction to all clubs which are members of the association.

The possessor of such a card then is granted guest privileges at all clubs in the association, subject only to the restrictions imposed by respective clubs.

O'HARA ON HAND

Pete O'Hara, former West Penn open champion, now giving golf lessons in a downtown department store, still is trying to get over the effects of his recent trip across the Atlantic. The genial Irishman had a stormy trip both ways.

Pete plans to swing into action at the Westmoreland C. C. on March 17, St. Patrick's Day. According to Pete, the club has lost few members.

Corbett, McLarnin Bout in Making

LOS ANGELES, March 8.—(INS.)—The world welterweight champion, Young Corbett III, of Fresno, Cal., today agreed to meet Jimmy McLarnin in a title bout here in May.

Promoters agreed to give Corbett $35,000, with a 37½ per cent privilege. McLarnin will receive about 20 per cent of the gate.

Women Stars Win In Belleair Play

BELLEAIR, Fla., March 8.—(AP.)—Favorites came through easily yesterday in the opening round of the Belleair women's golf championship. Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, medalist, won 6 and 4 over Mrs. H. B. Stetson, of Philadelphia.

Diana Fishwick, brilliant English player, led the field this morning with a 39 going out. Her opponent, D. Pix-Perkins, of England, was out in 40.

all of those ordinary fighters without half trying, and the fans know it . . . They want to see him in there with somebody who figures to beat him or make him step his handsomest to avoid defeat.

"Meanwhile, Herrera is willing to fight Yarosz in a handicap match or take on Barney Ross or anybody else the fans think has a chance with him . . . Tony is well fixed and has got to the point where he's after prestige . . . He has saved his money and probably can lay his hands on about $30,000—but don't tell everybody, for you know how much borrowing is going on these days."—HARRY KECK.

SHARKEY LISTS THREE FOES

NEW YORK, March 8.—Jack Sharkey told the New York Athletic Commission during a visit yesterday he plans to fight three more bouts and then retire next year. He said he'd like to fight them in this order:

Max Schmeling, Primo Carnera and Max Baer.

The New York Commission has barred a Sharkey-Carnera match, on the ground that Carnera is too big to box ordinary-sized heavyweights, although Sharkey already holds an easy victory over the Italian.

Sharkey said he considers Carnera the best of the present-day challengers, but he is willing to fight Schmeling first because there was so much criticism of his victory over the German last year. He said:

"The Dutchman knows I licked him and can do it again. If I didn't beat him, why is he running out on a return bout? He always picked his opponents, and he always will."

Altoona Will Not Be Cardinal Farm

ST. LOUIS, March 8.—(AP.)—William Bartleme, of the St. Louis Cardinals' office here, said today the Cardinal management has considered for some time the possibility of transferring its minor league interests in the East from Elmira, N. Y., to some other New York city, or Reading.

He said it was impossible to transfer Elmira's franchise to Altoona, as reported in eastern quarters, because Altoona belongs in the territory of the Mid-Atlantic League.

Chocolate-Watson Bout Again Sought

NEW YORK, March 8.—(INS.)—Jimmy Johnston, boxing promoter at Madison Square Garden, today renewed efforts to arrange a match between Kid Chocolate, of Cuba, and Seaman Tom Watson, of England, for the featherweight championship.

Johnston cabled Louis Guitterez, manager of the champion, in Havana proposing a match with the English titleholder for some time in May or June at the Garden Bowl.

NETTERS TO MEET

PIRATES' WHO'S WHO

Our Flag Contenders Answer Quiz, Giving Fans Lowdown on What's What and Why.

NO. 11—SHORTSTOP FLOYD (ARKY) VAUGHAN

PASO ROBLES, Calif., March 8.

Come, now, Floyd—you're among friends. Smile a little for the Pittsburgh folks. They like you and want to hear you broadcast something about yourself. You're quite a boy with Pirate fans—did you know that?

I am glad to hear it and I hope they continue to like me, but I'm not going to be a boy after tomorrow. I'll be 21 on that date, so I guess I will start talking back to the other players. Anyhow, I'm going to quit calling them "Mister."

Floyd Vaughan

Well, you still look like a boy, even though you have your share of serious obligations. By the way, there is a new guest at the Vaughan home, isn't there?

Yes, Patricia Ann was born just before I left for the spring training camp.

How did you get your nickname?

I just don't remember. But I guess it was put on me by the boys around my home when they learned I was born in Arkansas.

Where is your home?

In Fullerton, a suburb of Los Angeles. My father brought the family out here when I was an infant.

How did you get into baseball?

I've been playing it ever since I was a little bit of a kid. I have three brothers, two of them younger than me, and my older brother, Ken, who is with us here in Paso Robles. We all like baseball.

You broke into the professional game in quick fashion, didn't you?

I guess I did. After I finished high school I was playing around the sandlots and it wasn't long until a man came over and wanted me to go with him to the Pirate camp.

Who was that man?

He was Art Griggs, manager of the Tulsa club, and one of the best teachers I have met in baseball.

Did you relish the idea of jumping from the sandlots into a big league camp?

It was just like a dream, but I snapped out of it in time to get to Paso Robles.

When did you first join the Buccos?

Art took me and some other kids to the Pirate camp two years ago.

How did you get along?

It was a great experience, although I don't think anyone paid much attention to me I was too green. But Art had it all fixed to take me to the Western League, and that made me happy.

And you had no professional experience until you played for Griggs at Wichita in 1931?

No, Sir.

How did it feel to break into the Wichita lineup?

I guess I was sort of nervous, but Art nursed me along. I guess I was pretty much of a busher.

How do you feel now?

I'm still pretty much of a rookie, I guess, but I think I learned a lot with the Pirates last season. The other players were just fine to me, and I hope I can come through for them and the fans this year.

Have you any hobbies, Floyd?

Maybe you don't call it a hobby, but I hope some day I'll be able to make a few of the plays Honus Wagner used to make for the Pirates. If I don't, it will be my own fault, for Honus has been teaching me every day here.

COLLEGE SPORT PROGRAM CUT

The already well washed up college basketball campaign has been further curtailed, due to the banking holiday and its attended effects.

The Waynesburg - Allegheny game, booked for tonight, is off and the Geneva-Allegheny contest, slated for tomorrow and the Covenanter and Wash-Jeff game, listed for next Tuesday, also have been canceled.

Wash-Jeff also has called off for good its boxing match with Carnegie Tech, originally postponed because of ineligibility in the Tech camp.

In tonight's long college event, the West Virginia and West Virginia Wesleyan passers meet in a return clash at Buckhannon. Wesleyan won the first game, at Morgantown, 28 to 27.

TITANS VICTORS

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., March 8.—Westminster wound up in a tie for second place with Waynesburg in the Tri-State Conference race by beating Grove City here last night, 36 to 26.

The victory enabled the Titans to even the season two-game series with the Grovers. It was the final game of the season for both teams. Mauro Siljander, Westminster's senior star, led the scoring with 17 points. The lineup:

Hialeah Double Pays $1,150 on Wager of $2

MIAMI, Fla., March 8.—(INS.)—The banking holiday meant nothing today to one excited young man, who collected $1,150.20 on a $2 bet at Hialeah Park yesterday. He had the only daily double ticket issued on Aunt Marsa and Traffic Judge, long-priced winners.

It was the largest pay-off of the meeting.

I. K. S. PASSERS CLAIM TITLE

The Irene Kaufmann Settlement House basketball team claims the amateur championship of the tri-state district as a result of the brilliant record compiled by the Center avenue passers this season. Sidney Teller is resident director of the settlement house activities.

Sidney Teller

The settlement house quintet scored 25 straight victories before its winning streak was snapped by the Cleveland Rosenblum-Celtics in an exhibition game, 44-32. After losing to the noted professional stars, the team wound up its most successful campaign by defeating New Brighton.

The I. K. S. quintet did not compile its brilliant record by meeting inferior opponents as the list of victims reveals some of the best teams in the tri-state district. Among the strong clubs defeated by the Ziggy Kahn-coached machine were the North Siders, McKeesport Willigs, Jeannette Felders, Grove City, Connellsville, New Kensington, Monessen and Toronto.

Only once during the season did the I. K. S. team fail to score more than 30 points, the Jeannette Felders holding it to a 26-22 score. The Settlement House passers rolled up a total of 1,166 points to their opponents' 679. The record for the season:

EMIL YDE HOLDOUT

HOLLYWOOD, March 8.—(INS.)—Emil Yde, star pitcher, is a holdout from the Hollywood Club of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, and today asked permission to make a deal for himself with a major league club. The New York Giants, the Chicago White Sox, the Chicago Cubs and the Pittsburgh Pirates were reported interested.

GIANT INFIELD LAUDED BY BILL TERRY

LOS ANGELES, March 8.—(AP.)—The New York Giants will have the best infield in the National League during the coming campaign in Manager Bill Terry's opinion.

The regular quartet of Terry, Critz, Jackson and Vergez, with Leslie, Ryan and James in reserve, gives the Giants more infield strength than they've had in nine years, Terry believes.

Terry yesterday dug up what he calls the "ham and egg" play and sprung it on his pitchers in a long session of base running practice. He said:

"I call it the 'ham and egg' play because it's so old, but that's why they score a man now and then from third when a pitcher isn't watching anybody but the man apparently stealing second."

It worked several times before the hurlers got onto what was going on.

Baseball Briefs

PASADENA, Cal.—(AP.)—Al Simmons, slugging outfielder on whom the Chicago Whitesox pin much of their hopes, made a surprise appearance in spring training camp yesterday a day ahead of schedule, climbed into a uniform, and hit the first ball tarown to him over the Brookside Park fence. The former Philadelphia Athletics star appeared in fair condition. He said he felt rejuvenated after the removal of his infected teeth at Hot Springs, Ark.

MIAMI, Fla.—(AP.)—With three new players signed and two more who have not yet put their names down reported en route to Miami, the Brooklyn Dodgers went into their workout yesterday with renewed vigor. Rain stopped the drill before it was completed. Hack Wilson, slugging outfielder, was reported by club officials to be on his way to the training camp, as is Joe Stripp, third sacker, who has been spending the winter in Orlando.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—(AP.)—Manager Bucky Harris, of the Tigers, waxed enthusiastic over the initial training performance of Lynwood Rowe, lanky Texas Leaguer, who recently joined the Tiger forces. So impressed with the schoolboy's showing was the Tiger boss that he said he would start him in the first series they play in Detroit.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—(AP.)—A heavy tropical storm yesterday prevented the Boston Braves from doing much in the way of real conditioning work. The morning workout was washed out and during the second session Manager Bill McKechnie limited his players to a few setting-up drills.

FORT MYERS, Fla.—(AP.)—For the first time in 25 years, the Philadelphia Athletics are going to use a sliding pit as part of their spring training exercises. The pit was constructed at Terry Field yesterday at the request of the young players. Beginning today the A's are to go through a drill of learning the art of throwing themselves into the bags.

AVALON, Santa Catalina Island, Cal. (AP.)—Floyd (Babe) Herman, outfielder among the Chicago Cubs, displayed some of the hitting ability he showed as a Brooklyn star yesterday by driving in six runs with two circuit wallops, as the Brigands beat the Yannigans in a practice game, 13 to 4.

WINTER HAVEN, Fla.—(AP.)—Manager Burt Shotten says his pitching staff this year is "in beter shape" than any he has ever brought to the Phillies spring training camp. His optimistic outburst came at the close of a fast battery training session yesterday.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—(AP.)—The New York Yankees have come through the first 10 days of training in such excellent shape that Doc Paynter is getting genuinely worried. There hasn't been a sore arm or charley-horse in the camp since the athletes began work.

TAMPA, Fla.—(AP.)—In the best of health, Chick Hafey, bespectacled slugger, breezed into the training camp of the Cincinnati Reds yesterday and started to go right into a practice session. However, Manager Donie Bush sent him to bed to rest up from a motor trip from California.

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP.)—The Cleveland Indians were confronted with more preseason pitching trouble as Mel Harder went on the sick list for at least a week. Two other pitching mainstays, Wesley Ferrell and Willis Hudlin still are to be signed.

SARASOTA, Fla.—(AP.)—Rain held the Boston Red Sox workout to a single session yesterday. Manager Marty McManus again divided his squad into veteran and rookie groups. Most of his efforts were centered on his experienced pitchers, who appear to be rounding into shape.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—(AP.)—Eleven members of the St. Louis Browns got started yesterday in their first 1933 practice. The session was short and sweet, windy and wet. Lloyd Brown, southpaw, recently of Washington, signed his contract promptly during the morning and expressed his satisfaction with the trade which sent him to St. Louis.

BRADENTON, Fla. — (AP.) — Dazzy Vance, the holdout pitcher obtained by the St. Louis Cardinals from Brooklyn, was expected here today for a conference with Cardinal officials, President Sam Breadon announced. Two other holdouts, Frankie Frisch and Jim Lindsay, were not here yesterday for the first workout of the team.

Is It Always Gigolo's Fate To Be Despised?

He's just a Gigolo—

But why should folks crab at that?

Isn't a Gigolo's job as honest as any other?

And if a fellow can't find any other work to support himself and an invalid mother, why should he be condemned if he turns Play Boy?

Don wants to know. And maybe you can tell him.

I am coming to you for advice, because my problem is too complicated for me to untangle. I am relying on you to be able, perhaps, to see it from some angle that will solve it, so please help me if you can.

It's "This Depression" again. The problem is that my mother is very ill, and is dependent on me—and the only job I have is to escort some lady to dances, parties, night clubs, or wherever she chooses to go.

Mother's relatives are not aware of this, and they are always chiding me for "having a good time" while Mother is so ill, when in reality I am working—and it is work.

Positions are so scarce that it is not much use to look for other work now, and I am at a loss about what to do. Our livelihood depends on what I earn. I make good money at this work I am now doing, but I hesitate to tell people that it is work, and not just play, when I go out to such places as I have to go. I feel that they won't think much of me if I do tell them. In fact I don't like to do that kind of a job, myself. You know how it is.

NEEDS ADVICE

The way things are, I am forced to wear a mask so to speak, in the form of silence and a pleasant countenance, in the face of their talk.

Please advise me. I am not writing this just to get into print, but because I need advice and help.

What shall I do? DON.

So folks are snooty—?

Well, who started it, son?

Didn't you yourself?

Who was the first one to sneer at your job?

Weren't You?

You know you were. You, yourself, began the ducking and dodging. You, yourself, treated the whole thing as a Secret Shame.

Then why should you expect others to respect you—or your work, if you won't respect it yourself?

STAND UP FOR SELF

You're not "forced to wear a mask." If you really believe that you have an honorable job, if you honestly feel that you are keeping faith with yourself and carrying on nobly for the sake of the dear mother's need—then prove it! Take off that mask! Stand up for yourself—and you'll speedily find that others will stand up for you.

It's your own cowardice, and not the cruelty of others, which is "putting the bee" on you, son.

And that advice goes for every man or woman, in every sort of job. Honor yourself, and others will honor you. Despise yourself, and you'll be despised.

Which, of course, brings us to the other part of Don's problem.

Should, or shouldn't a gigolo's job be respected?

Is it any worse to earn money by dancing with a woman than it is to earn money by selling her shoes or real estate or legal advice?

And if you were in Don's shoes, what would you do?

Let your mother suffer, rather than be a Play Boy? Or take the first job you could find—and dare anyone to criticize?

A Vamp Has Difficulty Convincing Other Women—Fay King

By FAY KING

Any woman who gains a reputation as a beauty and vamp among men has difficulty in maintaining that reputation among women.

Women will always find her less attractive than she is reputed to be. Not because they are unfair or catty, but because they are women. Naturally no woman can impress other women as she does men.

Besides this, to convince her critical audience of women of her powers, she must make marriages as well as conquests.

Her triumphs in the arena of romantic affairs must be trumped with successes in the sea of matrimony.

And one brilliant marriage will not amaze them. There should be several, and especially at those times when other women begin to declare that she is fading.

HEART OF A WIFE

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Summons Compels Madge to Break Her Promise

Lee Chow at the school! Lee Chow who even Hugh Grantland had feared was a captive in the hands of the Chinese bandits. Did that mean—? But I had no time for speculation, indeed must put all semblance of it aside. Lillian must suspect nothing of the Chinese complication that had entered into the problem of rescuing the girls, and Dr. Barnes' voice sounded again, this time with a faintly imperative note.

"The connection is bad, I am afraid," he said. "I did not get your reply."

"I shall be there in less than 10 minutes," I said quickly. "Goodbye."

Lillian was gripping my shoulder almost before I had hung up the receiver.

"What is it?" she demanded.

"Dr. Barnes says a Mr. Lee is at the school and wishes me to look at some curios as soon as possible, as he has an urgent errand elsewhere," I repeated quickly. "Of course that means Lee Chow, so let me get my things."

Her hand fell from my arm, and she stood silent for the few seconds it took me to throw on a small hat, shrug into my motor coat and catch up my purse. But she barred the door as I came toward it, and spoke quickly, warningly.

"Have you forgotten that promise to Dicky?"

"Not for an instant," I told her, "but before this call, the only thing at stake was the comfort to the girls of having a woman with them when they were rescued. Lee Chow, for all we know, may bring information which might well mean success or failure to the expedition, life or death to the girls.

"No promise in the world could stand in the face of that possibility. If I were disabled, and there was no one else, you would have to leave Helena, ill as she is, and go to the school."

"Perhaps I ought to go, anyway," she said doubtfully, but I put out my hand and swung her aside.

"You know Dr. Barnes doesn't want you to be seen at the school, when they have given out that Marion and Carolyn have gone home," I said. "I'll let you know the second I have anything worth telling you."

Mary's door was ajar, and she came through it, dressed for the street, as I neared it.

"I heard the telephone ringing in your room," she said, "and I thought I'd better get ready to play wire-haired fox-terrier again. They're the best watch-dogs, aren't they?"

"I'll be glad to have you along," I said, forcing my voice to cordiality, for my resentment at the promise Dicky had exacted from her, to accompany me everywhere, must not be extended to this warm-hearted child. "Where's Noel?"

I expected to hear her say, "Down-stairs," but instead her voice changed subtly, and I heard the echo of fear in her answer:—

"He and his father are with Uncle Harry and the rest. Noel left a note for me, saying so."

Mrs. Barnes was waiting for us at the side entrance, and took us directly into Dr. Barnes' private study, where her husband and Lee Chow rose at our entrance.

That Lee Chow had made certain arrangements before my arrival I knew when, after the briefest of salutations, Dr. Barnes addressed his wife.

"Suppose, my dear, that we take Miss Mary into your private sitting room for a few minutes. Just knock upon this door, Mrs. Graham, if you want us."

They were gone upon the word, and Lee Chow and I were left facing each other. I was breathless with suspense, and I guessed that behind his oriental composure there lurked similar excitement. He wasted no time in the usual conversational amenities of his race, but adopting the brusque mannerism of Hugh Grantland, with whom he had been associated so long, he said quickly:

"Please tell me everything that has happened since yesterday. I have been unable to get in touch with you for that interval.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Walk Independently

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

For quite some time my young lady friend and I have been having friendly arguments over the following: Although my friend agrees with me that it is not proper for a gentleman to hold a lady's arm constantly, while walking, nevertheless, she does not think it right for a woman to hold on to a man's arm despite my showing her the many that do so. Now, who is right? FREDDY.

Dear, sir, this young lady is right, and you should sing a song of praise that she has such sure taste about this social question! I admire her for this . . . And I hope that now you will too. And I admire her even more in sticking to her point of view in spite of your showing her, or trying to show her, by pointing out other girls who do this, you see . . . and so do I . . . that she is right about this, and that they are wrong. The girl who "drapes" herself on a man's arm while she is walking on the street with him hasn't the good taste or the dignity of the girl who insists on walking independently. Of course, if she needs help in crossing the street or if the pavement is icy or unsafe, that is another matter. Then she needs the service of the young man, and this always alters cases, of course.

And may I, too, Freddy, take up that word "constantly" in your sentence? It is never proper for a man to hold a woman's arm. When they are crossing the street, he may take hold of her elbow, lightly, to assist her in crossing, but he doesn't "hold her arm while walking."

Contract Bridge

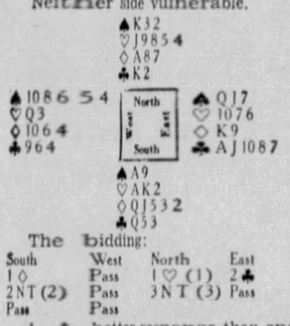
HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Utilizing Your Chances

Quite frequently, if a correct plan of play is made, the Declarer has not only one chance, but two or more, to make his contract. The making of a plan involves consideration of possible contingencies, so that if one line of play should fail, another line is still available. Of course, this cannot be done with all hands, as some are of a very rigid type and permit of no variations in development, but the following hand is one in which the Declarer had two chances to make his contract and failed because he did not try the safer way first.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡ (1)	2 ♣
2NT (2)	Pass	3NT (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A better response than one notrump, as it permits the exchange of further information at low stages of the bidding.

2—South knows that if the hand is to be played at notrump, he must make the bid, as it is improbable that North has a sufficient stopper in the suit adversely bid.

3—An alternative bid here would be three diamonds, in which case it is probable that the safer heart game-contract would have been reached.

West's Opening lead was the club 9, which Dummy covered with the King. This was the correct play, as it forced East to take the trick if he did not want to give the Declarer 2 club tricks. East continued with two more rounds of clubs, the suit being cleared on the third lead. South knew, of course, that he must lose a diamond trick, and to him it appeared that the crucial question in the play was whether the King of diamonds was in the hand of East or West. If West held the King of diamonds, the contract could be made without difficulty, as South could probably figure on 9 tricks—four diamonds, one club, two spades and two hearts. South, therefore, elected to put the entire issue of the hand on the location of this card, and led a small diamond, which was won with the Ace in Dummy and the suit returned. East won with the King and then cashed two more club tricks, defeating the contract 1 trick.

South's correct line of play was to have played the Ace and King of hearts. There was an even chance, with only five hearts outstanding, that the Queen would drop and that South could thus make his contract without attempting to establish diamonds. If this failed, there remained the alternative of the diamond play. As the cards lie, this course of play would have won, and South would have made five hearts, two spades, one club and one diamond, and fulfilled his game contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

♠K2 ♡— ◇AKQ10876542 ♣A

Answer: One diamond. This bid could hardly be passed by the other three players, in view of the holding of but 3½ honor-tricks and the freakish distribution. An Opening two-diamond bid should not be made because of the meager honor-strength and, therefore, the danger of an unsuccessful Slam contract.

How to Keep Well

Neglecting Irritations of Throat

Many persons are susceptible to inflammations of the throat, of the pharynx and larynx. They are particularly common at this time of the year. Sudden changes in weather and exposure to cold and dampness lead to irritation of the throat.

Dr. Copeland

Pharyngitis is an inflammation of the mucous membranes or lining of the upper part of the throat. The trouble may be traced to infections of the nose, such as chronic sinusitis or chronic catarrh of the nose. In these cases the inflammation gradually creeps from the nose into the throat.

Pharyngitis may also follow exposure to germs received from the nose and throat of some infected person. These germs are quickly spread from one individual to another, being transmitted by kissing, coughing, sneezing and drinking from contaminated cups. Pharyngitis may follow the excessive use of highly spiced foods, alcohol, tobacco or the inhalation of smoke or irritating dust or vapor.

The irritation may result from some constitutional disorder, such as constipation, anemia or tuberculosis. Its cause can be determined only by a thorough physical examination. When the underlying cause is discovered and removed, the sufferer is assured of permanent relief. Common sense dictates that any inflammation of the throat demands immediate medical attention.

This affliction, inflammation of the voice box, often follows exposure to dampness and cold. A cold which starts in the head often results in laryngitis with loss of voice. It may also follow overuse of the voice and is a common complaint on the part of orators and public speakers.

I warn you about hoarseness that lasts for several months. This symptom should never be considered as coming from a simple laryngitis. Something more serious should be suspected when hoarseness persists. A careful and thorough examination of the throat is essential. Negligence may prove dangerous.

Answers to Health Queries

G. St. C. Q.—What will eradicate blackheads and pimples? 2: What should a girl of 14, 5 feet 3 inches tall, weigh? What should a girl of 17, 5 feet 7 inches tall, weigh?

A—For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question. 2: They should weight respectively: 113 and 130 pounds. This would be about average for their respective ages and heights as determined by examination of a large number of persons.

Household Hints

Too Many Toys

If the young child received so many toys on his birthday that he cannot get around to them all, take away a few of the ones to which he is paying the least attention and save them for a rainy day later on when he is more used to the others. They will be a wonderful treat and a great help to a busy mother.

Easily Transferred

Particular attention should be paid to the mouthpiece of the telephone by the person in the house who has a bad cold. If he is considerate he will wipe it out with a cloth wrung out of water in which a few drops of disinfectant have been stirred each time he uses the telephone.

The Slipper Habit

Instill the idea into the children to put on their bedroom slippers as they get out of bed. They are then less likely to catch cold and are protected against a stray pin that may be in their path to another room.

A Sound Deadener

Line the wooden tray of baby's high chair with a piece of linoleum that has been varnished. Then he can bang away with his spoon, rattles, etc., and it won't be nearly as hard on the nerves—or the woodwork.

FRICK'S OFFICIAL CAREER WITH CARNEGIE TERMINATED

Accepted Suggestion Of Steelmaster to Resign Chairmanship

FROM THE LIFE OF ANDREW CARNEGIE
By BURTON J. HENDRICK

Abridged for exclusive publication in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph by special permission of Mrs. Andrew Carnegie

An episode that greatly annoyed Carnegie was the acquisition by Frick of a pretentious mill site on the Monongahela River, six miles north of Homestead. The Carnegie people had marked this property for their own, and in the hands of a rival organization it might prove a serious matter. According to the reporters, whose interest in the Carnegie imbroglio was growing keener every day, Frick was planning to dissolve his old connection and launch out as a steel maker independently.

For the chairman of the Carnegie company to obtain, as an individual, a property which the company intended to annex, Carnegie declared to be an improper act. A little careless, as usual, in his speech, he made no secret of his convictions on this point, and his uncomplimentary remarks were in due time reported to Frick. That infuriated gentleman stalked in to the next meeting of the Carnegie board all primed for Homeric battle.

Minor details having been disposed of, the chairman rose and delivered a philippic against the majority owner, while the other members of the association listened startled and speechless. "I have stood a great many insults from Mr. Carnegie in the past," said Frick, "but I will submit to no further insults in the future."

He would surrender the site to the steel company on one condition. That condition was that Mr. Carnegie should apologize for his criticism. Hurling this thunderbolt, Frick left the meeting of the Carnegie board, never to enter it again.

No Apology

Probably the least apologetic man in the association at that moment was Andrew Carnegie. The minutes recording Frick's latest defiance were duly forwarded to New York and read by the person principally concerned in the privacy of his library. The last emotion they aroused in Carnegie's breast was remorse. He still believed that Frick's ownership of a property which the company might need for its growth was unbecoming, and he had no intention of revising his judgment. This outburst seemed to be the culminating injury in a long chapter of grievances.

That quickness of decision for which he was now famous was manifest. So far as the Carnegie association was concerned Frick's official career was at an end.

At this juncture Carnegie's affections turned instinctively to two men—his cousin, George Lauder, and Charles M. Schwab, who year by year had been growing more important as the executive manager of the concern. With Schwab as the absolute head, combining his responsibilities with those previously exercised by Frick, the great property could face the coming years in safety. Carnegie's personal fondness for Schwab increased as the difficulties with Frick accumulated, and now that the anticipated parting had come, the young man's support was a genuine consolation.

Schwab's Loyalty

"Regarding myself," Schwab wrote at this critical moment, permit me to say, first, I am always with you. Aside from deep personal regard and feeling for you, you have heaped honors and riches upon me and I would indeed be an ingrate to do otherwise. My interests and best wishes will always be for you and the old firm, and when they don't want me any more I shall even then never give a thought to any other. Believe me, dear Mr. Carnegie, I am always with you and yours to command. I want to be straightforward towards all. I believe the great majority of important partners feel as I do. By important partners I do not necessarily mean those occupying high offices. The reverse as a rule is true."

"No compromise this time," Carnegie wrote George Lauder. "I put Frick back as president of the Frick Coke Company in the Walker fight, and again as chairman of the Carnegie Steel Company at his request. Not any third time! A clean sweep this time. Nothing can move me from this. I'll have no more trouble, that's settled. See C. M. Schwab and keep in touch. All hangs on him . . . Phipps is tied to Frick I fear. Partners together with Moore you know."

Partners' Attitude

At that time there were 36 partners in the Carnegie Steel Company. Of these only two, Henry Phipps and the secretary, Francis T. F. Lovejoy, championed Frick's course. The remaining 34 agreed with Carnegie that the elimination of the chairman was inevitable.

Frick maintained that this practical unanimity against him was not significant. All the partners, he said, owed their positions to Carnegie; all could be ousted by his nod; naturally they were afraid to move in Frick's defense. In this there is a considerable amount of truth, though not to the extent Frick asserted.

Anyone who has had the slightest contact with Carnegie's former partners, as has the present writer, is impressed by their intense loyalty to Carnegie and their affection for h[illegible] An absence of enthusiasm for Frick is just as apparent.

The chairman is regarded with a positive but detached respect. His old co-workers admire his ability, his force, and, in certain phases, his character, but they do not regard him as a friend. His attitude was never intimate, but cold and searching.

"The young partners were all afraid of Frick," is the most frequent comment heard. Irrespective of Carnegie's power as the great stockholder, therefore, all the associates gladly placed themselves at his side. To exchange Frick's forbidding leadership for the amiable dictation of Schwab represented a personal relief to practically every member.

"Cause for Divorce"

As soon as Carnegie reached Pittsburgh his first act was to call on Frick. By this time the chairman had recovered from his passion and was in the mildest mood. Carnegie always insisted that his partner's outbursts gave him more pain than their victims. After the tumult subsided a period of calm supervened—the man became softspoken reasonable, almost repentant. And the Frick that now greeted Carnegie was an entirely different person from the chairman who had stormed in the board room only a few days before. Even the edict Carnegie quietly promulgated did not disturb his serenity. The last trouble his visitor informed him, was conclusive; it was clear that the two men could no longer remain in the same association.

"It is a case of incompatibility of temper," said Carnegie, using again his favorite illustration. "In itself a good cause for divorce."

Frick nodded, "I am glad that you have put it that way," he said.

"The one way we can keep friends," continued Carnegie, "is by not being in business together. We have had two quarrels and they have been patched up; it is useless to try any longer."

Again Frick acquiesced. He well knew, he said, that his days as chairman were over—that the next meeting of the board would not re-elect him.

Frick Resigns

That, Carnegie replied, was the case. There was no desire, however, to humiliate Mr. Frick; why not resign before the meeting was held, so that the act might seem voluntary? "We can make a public announcement that you wish to be relieved of routine duties and to become one of the consultative partners—Carnegie, Phipps, Lauder and Singer."

Frick received the suggestion pleasantly enough, and Carnegie left. The chairman immediately sent his resignation—a single line, "I hereby resign as chairman of the board of managers of the Carnegie Steel Company"—which was immediately accepted. For the present the episode was closed.

There was one way in which the necessary Carnegie-Frick "divorce" could be obtained: that was by purchasing outright Frick's stock in the steel company, but everyone dreaded to meet the issues such a transaction would present, for a veritable Pandora's box of troubles would escape as quickly as the suggestion took form. That old matter of "book value" and "earning power," a question deferred for several years, could then be postponed no longer.

If purchased under the "Iron Clad," Frick's share would have a value of $4,900,000. One might regard this as generous compensation for 10 years' work, even when the services were so valuable as Frick's unquestionably had been. This stock represented little original investment on his part; it had been assigned and paid for in the way already described. But, if "earning power" and "good will" were considered, Frick's comparatively small ownership would yield him not far from $15,000,000.

Still the question might have been left in statu quo and settlement postponed to that time, not far distant, when the future of the company was to be determined, except for the continuously irritating disagreement on coke.

Action Is Upset

The extrication of Frick from the Carnegie board made this issue still more acrimonious, and in bringing the contention to a decision Carnegie showed that he could act quite as abruptly as his antagonist. Frick's directors had met, denied the existence of any contract, and voted that in future the Carnegie company should pay market quotations for their wares.

Carnegie, by virtue of his own holdings and those of the association, had it in his power to upset this action. He unhesitatingly did so. The annual meeting of the Frick shareholders was held on January 10, 1900, and on this occasion Frick's supporters vanished from the board, their places being taken by members prepared to execute Carnegie's instructions.

The former resolution fixing the price of coke was promptly rescinded, quotations for the future were stabilized at $1.35, and "overcharges" for the past year, amounting to about $500,000, were ordered restored to the Carnegie coffers.

The meeting at which this revolution ensued was as volcanic as the one that had led to Frick's resignation as chairman. Frick protested every step, denouncing the proceedings as "high handed business," and, all his objections having been overruled, made one of his angry exits, threatening legal action.

"You will find that there are two sides to this matter," he said; the Frick company would be enjoined from carrying out the new contract and from making restitution for overpayments.

Whatever one may think of the merits of this dispute, one truth at least is clear: the situation had become unbearable. Here was the ex-chairman of the Carnegie company, still a large owner in the property, preparing to bring a lawsuit against that association—a suit which, in the name of John Walker and others, was subsequently brought.

"If Frick is going to fight us," Carnegie remarked, "he must not be permitted to do so from the inside." In other words, the moment had arrived to call on Frick to surrender his stock in the Carnegie Association. The issue, so long postponed and so dreaded, had been focussed. The newspapers were again publishing stories of Frick's future plans.

In company with Andrew W. Mellon—so the story ran—he was about to embark on steel manufacture. Frick's presence in the Carnegie company would hardly be endured under these conditions, especially as he was insisting on his right to attend meetings. Carnegie had no fear of Frick as a competitor, for he knew his weaknesses just as he knew his strength, but he did not propose to give him the advantage of an inside position at the time he was managing a rival works. Frick was a business man, and probably had not the slightest expectation of playing such a dual role; he knew his exclusion was inevitable: the only argument left was the price to be paid for his interest.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

National Supply Company of Delaware and subsidiaries, including Spang Chalfant & Co., Inc., for 1932 shows net loss of $3,847,638 after interest, depreciation, taxes and preferred dividends of Superior Engine Company and Spang Chalfant & Co., etc. This compares with net loss of $1,495,797 in 1931. Operating profits amounted to $5,349,459, compared with $5,658,987 in 1931. Cash on hand was $14,870,944 at the end of the year, compared with $17,003,460 at the close of 1931.

Homestake Mining Company report for 1932, shows net profit of $2,495,789 after all charges, including taxes, abandonments, depreciation and depletion, equal to $9.94 a share on 251,160 outstanding of $10 par stock. This compares with net in 1931 of $1,492,870, or $5.94 a share on the same number outstanding.

COMPETITION DISCUSSED BY ECONOMIST

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, March 8.—Competition is generally assumed in the statement of any economic "law."

This is quite similar to the assumption of the chemist that "chemically pure" materials will be used, or that his scales will be protected from disturbing influences. In commercial work these conditions may not obtain, and just so in business, competition may not exist or may be imperfect.

But by reasoning on the basis of competition, the economist simplifies the problem of dealing with complicated motives and forces. Furthermore, there is reason to believe that under favorable conditions, competition secures the best economic results attainable.

WORKERS COMPETE

We may define "competition" as rivalry for the possession or control of anything of economic importance. Thus business men or laborers compete with one another for markets or for jobs.

Competition exists and is effective when no individual or group has control over the price of the thing in question. To the extent that any control over markets exists, we say that competition is imperfect.

When any individual or group gains power to control prices monopoly replaces competition. The monopoly may be partial or complete.

MAY BE UNECONOMIC

Competition varies greatly in efficiency, this depending upon the motives, intelligence and knowledge of conditions possessed by the competitors. When they are influenced by irrational or non-economic motives, such as sentiment, custom, or love of power, they may not seek the most efficient methods. When they are ignorant of costs or do not know the true state of supplies or demand, they may do uneconomic things.

On the whole, however, competition is effective in most of the business world, and, although it is often inefficient, we are continually seeking to increase the knowledge and intelligence of business competitors.

We should remember, too, that under effective competition it is reasonable to expect that the least efficient competitors will lose and be eliminated from the rivalry.

'LIFE OF TRADE'

The statement is often made that "competition is the life of trade," and despite much imperfection and inefficiency there is an important element of truth in it.

One can hardly deny (1) that the average individual knows his own economic interest better than any body of representatives now available as a "planning" agency, and (2) that the average individual has a stronger incentive to seek his own economic advantage than any other.

But if these statements be approximately true as generalizations, it follows that the average individual may well be allowed a great deal of freedom to compete, and that business as a whole benefits thereby.

GENERAL WELFARE GOAL

There is little danger nowadays that we will forget that the general welfare of society is the goal, and that if competition becomes brutal or destructive it must be regulated. We know that in certain industries of the "public utility" type competition in prices cannot be made to work satisfactorily.

It seems, therefore, that the best course is to set aside certain definite fields in which we apply public regulation, and in the remainder of the business world encourage a reasoning and reasonable rivalry for the business prizes.

This we may do by prescribing the rules for the business game (prescribing reasonable penalties for violations), and by constantly seeking to educate competitors to an appreciation of their common interest in the general prosperity of their trade and of the whole nation.

BRITAIN'S GOLD VIEW SAME

LONDON, March 8.—(AP.)—From the highest financial quarters of the British government it was learned today that America's domestic banging crisis has in no way affected Great Britain's policy with regard to the gold standard.

That policy, as reaffirmed today, is that while Great Britain looks forward to an eventual return to gold as the most suitable international standard of value, no return to it can be contemplated until there is a promise of a more workable system than existed just before this country abandoned gold in 1931.

Also certain definite conditions must be fulfilled, or must be well on the road to realization, before the officials who help to formulate the financial policy of the British government will advise the cabinet that the time is ripe for a return to the gold standard.

Meantime Great Britain will take advantage of every opportunity to stabilize the world monetary system, and it is believed here that a large measure of agreement can be reached when international negotiations are begun.

Pathway For Recovery Is Now Cleared

By B. C. FORBES

A PREDICTION: The banking and currency deadlock will be promptly cured.

Another prediction: Instead of nervousness, a new spirit of hopefulness will manifest itself.

Mr. Forbes

CONFIDENCE in the ability and readiness of the Roosevelt administration to take effective action is felt and expressed.

Franklin D. Roosevelt in his very first utterance as President of the United States pledged himself to give the country action. He lost no time in starting to fulfill that pledge. He and his secretary of the treasury, William H. Woodin, have acted most promptly and decisively. They have exhibited genuine and sympathetic understanding of the plight of the public caused by the breakdown of banking.

CLEARING HOUSE certificates and other "scrip" money are nothing new in this country. They have been used before and used successfully.

That they will be accepted and function successfully again on this occasion can be taken for granted.

Not one dollar of scrip will be issued until there has first been deposited and pledged for its safety and soundness adequate security of unquestionable worth.

Therefore, there is no reason why scrip should not be accepted without the slightest hesitation by everybody.

It will be so accepted.

"Nothing is so disastrous as uncertainty."

It was, therefore, entirely logical that uncertainty as to what might happen bankingwise should have proved extremely harmful, harmful to securities, harmful to commodities, harmful to business.

After what has happened in the way of suspension of banking, it is logical to look for a complete change in sentiment, a complete change in psychology, a complete displacement of fear by hopefulness, by faith that the crisis is over and that ways and means for inaugurating recovery have been furnished.

THE WRITER recalls that after clearing house certificates were utilized to meet the 1907 panic in New York, revival shortly set in and that the back of the financial trouble was thoroughly broken and things were again moving along gratifyingly within a few months.

HERE IS a bit of inside history of what happened at the other side of the continent in the panic that preceded that of 1907, namely, in 1893. George I. Cochran, president of the Pacificul Mutual Life, writes this column:

"I was attorney for the clearing house in Los Angeles in 1893. When a line seven blocks long formed before the Los Angeles National Bank I suggested that it was not fair to pay depositors in full and then have nothing to pay other depositors.

"As the bank had about 30 per cent of deposits on hand in cash, I recommended that, instead of paying the first comers in full, that the bank give a certain percentage in cash and a certificate reading that the balance would be paid when the bank realized on its securities. This plan was put into effect and the run stopped."

Mr. Cochran adds:

"It seems to me that things will now get better. I am still an optimist."

THAT A pathway is being cleared for recovery who can doubt?

PORK DECLINES AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, March 8.—(AP.)—The wholesale price of fresh pork broke sharply today simultaneously with the arrival of a liberal supply of live hogs in the stock yards.

The specter of short meat supplies vanished quickly. Estimated receipts of hogs were 18,000 head, 10,000 more than was indicated yesterday and a run equal to that of last Wednesday. Stock yard officials were amazed at the receipts, especially since packing plants had only 2,000 on direct billing.

As a result, live hog prices started 10 to 15 cents lower than yesterday's peak and trading was slow. Pork cuts immediately reflected the decline.

Beef prices showed relatively little change. Lamb cuts also held near normal levels.

Wholesale produce trading was little changed. Butter receipts were smaller than usual and prices, quoted unofficially on the "Street," were ½ to 1 cent higher. Egg receipts were fairly heavy and quotations unchanged. Poultry and potatoes likewise showed no quotable price revision.

Steel Prices.

POWER OUTPUT DECLINES

NEW YORK, March 8.—(AP.)—Electric power output fell slightly last week to 1,422,875,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,425,511,000 in the preceding week, which included Washington's Birthday, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. There was a decline of 6.4 per cent from the corresponding week in 1932, while the preceding week was off 5.7 per cent from the like 1932 period.

Power consumption in the central industrial region varied little, being 9.6 per cent below a year ago, compared with a decrease of 9.4 per cent from last year in the previous week. In the Atlantic seaboard territory the decrease was 5.2 per cent, against a decrease of 4.1 per cent the week before. New England was down 7.1 per cent, against 5.5 per cent. The loss on the Pacific Coast was 5.3 per cent, compared with 5.4 per cent.

NATION SCANS MONETARY PROBLEM

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The euphemistically termed bank holiday gives the American people an opportunity to crystallize their thoughts on economic first principles.

Temporarily the country has become a vast laboratory for the study of monetary economics.

Though the mechanism of credit has become temporarily stalled, the underlying basis for credit is still intact. The essence of credit inheres in man's faith in the integrity and capacity of the people they know. With intuitive brilliance, merchants from coast to coast have invited strangers to come to their stores and open up charge accounts which will tide them over the banking interregnum. The business friendship created in this hour of need will in many instances prove enduring.

Mr. Rukeyser

CHECKS CHIEF MEDIUM

As for the banks, their immediate duty is to perfect emergency machinery for facilitating normal intercourse in goods and services. It should be remembered that in normal times 90 per cent of our business is conducted on credit, and that in the United States the bank check has become our principal medium of exchange. Banks should encourage the normal use of bank checks which may be cleared among the banks themselves through Clearing House certificates. No policy which favors the hoarder of cash and penalizes the normal user of bank checks should be tolerated.

In suggesting a formula for meeting the immediate banking situation one outstanding industrial analyst proposed:

"1—Separate solvent from insolvent banks.

"2—Let solvent banks reopen with the following conditions: (a) Temporary restrictions on gold exports and withdrawals. (b) Temporary restriction on currency withdrawals. (c) The usual freedom for use of checks in ordinary course of business. (d) Clear public and official statement as to policy being followed and as to soundness of banks permitted to open.

UNIFORM LAW

"3. Immediate passage of uniform banking legislation, with Federal amendment if necessary, creating only a national system and permitting branches at least within Federal Reserve districts. This legislation to be combined with passage of essential regulatory provisions of Glass Bill.

"4. Declaration against debasing the standard of value.

"5. Absolute commitment by the President and the governors of the several states for immediate drastic reduction of all public expenditures, national and local, and for reduction rather than any further increase in taxes."

EXCHANGE RATE NOT QUOTED

NEW YORK, March 8.—(AP.)—That part of world trade which functions through the use of the dollar quizzed Wall street closely today in an effort to determine what the future course of exchange rates may be.

Little significance was attributed to sporadic exchange quotations which filtered into the financial community from abroad indicating that the dollar had sold at substantial discounts. Such transactions, it was pointed out, could indicate merely that in a few isolated cases frightened holders of dollars tried to convert them into English, Canadian or other currencies, chiefly through "bootleg" channels.

Until foreign exchange markets are again open in the regular way, it was explained, there can be no valid index as to the quotation of the American dollar in Great Britain or Europe.

Crude Oil Storage Shows Big Decline

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The United States Bureau of Mines reports a decline of 4,134,000 barrels in aggregate storage of all petroleum oils during January. Stocks of gasoline increased 2,047,000 barrels during the month.

Four Fox Directors Retire From Board

Blank proposals can be obtained at the office of the Department of Public Welfare, Room 613, City-County Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Each proposal submitted must be accompanied by a bond in the sum of Five Hundred ($500.00) Dollars, fully and legally executed with a surety to trust company, which has complied with the city ordinance relating thereto; and said bond shall be in the form of bond furnished by the City of Pittsburgh.

The Mayor and the Director of Department of Public Welfare reserve the right to reject any or all proposals, or to accept any proposal which they deem to be to the best interests of the City of Pittsburgh.

Grain Trade Asks Reopening of Wheat Pit

WASHINGTON, March 8.—(AP.)—Representatives of the principal grain exchanges today asked for modification of the banking rules to permit immediate reopening of their markets to both cash and futures trading on the grounds that the nation's food supplies might otherwise be seriously disturbed.

The representatives presented their problem to Henry Morgenthau, Jr., new chairman of the Farm Board. He was expected to seek the opinion of Secretary Woodin regarding the prospects of modifying the rules.

BANK HOLIDAY HITS STEEL

NEW YORK, March 8.—Iron Age says:

The country-wide bank holiday had had a marked effect on the volume of steel business and production. Ingot output has declined to a national average of 15 per cent from 17 per cent last week, but business has been so abruptly interrupted that mills are rolling mainly on orders placed a week or so ago, indicating a further contraction in operations unless an emergency banking system is speedily placed in effect.

Some metal-working plants have closed down because of lack of funds with which to meet payrolls and other obligations. From such sources there have been suspension of steel orders. The automobile industry has also held up considerable tonnage, but in the main consumers are taking steel that is ready for shipment, most of which is for work in progress in their shops.

Despite the drastic character of the President's bank proclamation, there is a feling of reassurance in the iron and steel trade and a belief that, once the emergency banking system has been established, business will proceed with greater acceleration than has been in evidence thus far in the year.

The Iron Age composite prices are unchanged at 1.923 cents a pound for finished steel, $13.56 a gross ton for pig iron and $6.83 a gross ton for heavy melting steel scrap.

GRIPPING SERIAL OF A BUSINESS GIRL'S BATTLE FOR LOVE

CHAPTER XVII.

Then off . . . gaining momentum every second . . . the wild rush of air in their ears . . . the heady thrill of speed, and yet more speed . . . their halt in a whirl of snow at the bottom!

"I can't believe I'm on the earth! It's like having wings—when we speed like this it's like being halfway to heaven!" exclaimed Judith.

They forgot other people . . . time . . . no one existed but themselves and this lovely silence of Nature that seemed to vibrate with an inner meaning for them.

At the end of one mad flight, the sled spilled them in a drift of snow . . . Barry pulled Judith out and up and held her in his arms as though he'd never let her go, and kissed her repeatedly.

"Barry—oh, don't! If anyone should see!" But he silenced her protests with his lips on hers, and their bodies so close that they could feel each others' hearts beating.

"What do I care what anybody thinks! You're mine! Tell me you're all mine, Judith darling?"

A MAGIC MOMENT

Ah, now was the time when he would speak! Now he would say a definite word about their future . . . an engagement?

"You—you do want me—as much as that?"

"I do. I love you, Judith."

"Say it again! Again!" It was as though warm tears spilled over her heart . . . tears of sheer rapture.

It was a magic moment, there in the silence of the snows. Oh! It was wrong of her to doubt him. She would trust him.

They went off on their skis again, trailing the sled, and had coffee and doughnuts in a funny little shack, where the proprietress—old and toothless, but with romance in her heart—took them for a honeymoon couple, and became embarrassingly personal.

"But it's so crazy of her——"

"Not a bit of it. The old dame's a prophetess."

So he did mean——? Why, of course he did! One day they would have their real honeymoon together . . .

It was Barry's natural delicacy of feeling that held him back. Judith assured herself. When he was in a position to propose to her, he would. Although she'd be glad and willing to go right on working at the bank after she was married, as before, maybe it would take a little of the bloom from their romance to speak of mundane finance now . . .

LORANDA'S CALL

They were halfway home when over the valleys came a high, sweet yodelling.

"Gracious! What's that?" Judith exclaimed.

Barry's face changed. A startled, almost concerned expression flickered into his eyes. He said: "Why, I guess that's Loranda calling us. She learned to yodel when she was at school in Switzerland—I'll bet we're awfully late for luncheon."

"Does it matter very much?" A stab she was ashamed of . . . because she told herself there was no cause to feel jealous of another girl . . . went through Judith's heart for a moment.

"Maybe we've been a bit inconsiderate going off on our own like this," Barry said uncertainly. Then, seeing Judith's face fall, he added quickly:

"Not that it wasn't worth it, darling. I had to snatch this time with you." As they skimmed along faster on their skis he said, in a non-committal tone, "I suppose I'd better play bridge with them this afternoon, since Loranda's tied by the leg. I hate to lose a moment of this gorgeous day. It's an infernal nuisance, isn't it?"

Judith felt chilled. To her own surprise she found herself defending Loranda. "I don't suppose it's very pleasant for her to be tied by the leg, as you say, on a holiday. She likes to be in on everything. She's so active."

"The life and soul of the party, huh?" That queer expression flickered in his eyes again—cynical, rather.

No more was said till they reached the log house on the hill, and found the party at luncheon.

"Bad boy! First nearly killing me last night, and then deserting me this morning!" she pouted, taking no notice of Judith.

Directly opposite was Lawton Clissold.

"We're talking of clothes," said Genevieve, her red-haired friend, languidly, but scrutinizing Judith's garb, "Miss Brian, that skiing outfit is a perfect pippin! Wherever did you get it?"

Now, as it had been borrowed from Loranda's shop in town (against the owner's knowledge) there could have been no more embarrassing question.

Judith flushed scarlet. She turned appealing eyes on Zella, who had wished this costume on her.

"Why, that model's all over New York—haven't you seen it in the shops?" And Zella rattled off the names of several well-known stores on Fifth avenue, hoping to divert attention from the question.

"Zella, why don't you get it for our shop?" Loranda asked, her eyes—very sharp just now—going from Zella's face to Judith's.

"Okay with me. But lets not talk shop just now—we're on a holiday," said Zella airily.

Genevieve, however, was not to be silenced. She addressed Judith again. "Cliss tells me he saw you at the theater in the most divine silver wrap and dress not long ago, with a pastel chiffon top. He said Loranda had one exactly like it in her shop—he'd seen it there—and as it was very much my style he went in to get it for me for my birthday. But the dress had gone——"

SUSPICION

"It was sold to Lady Riverton of 207B Park avenue," Zella put in hastily.

"And Judith wore one exactly like it at the theater, did you say? That's odd, considering it was supposed to be an original!" said Loranda. They were all looking at poor Judith now, who from red had gone pale with embarrassment. "If you buy $150 models, Zella, old thing, and then get stung by seeing copies of them parading round the town, I'll say you're not as smart as I thought you were!"

"Maybe Judith's got a rich Sugar Daddy up her sleeve, and been hiding him from all of us?" suggested Betty Graves, grinning. She was sorry for Judith's predicament, and it was rather mean of Loranda to rub it in in front of all of them—but of course Judith had no right to sneak clothes out like that.

She'd a strong suspicion that the heavenly little skiing costume Judith wore just now was from the same showcase. Yes, Judith was going a bit too far . . . Loranda, if roused, could be perfectly devilish . . .

"Your old man must pay e-normous salaries in his bank, Betty old thing," drawled Loranda. "I've a mind to ask him for a job myself, judging by results on Judith!"

"Come, come, now," interrupted Barry Deane, feeling the antagonism in the air, and waiting to divert attention from Judith. "Although no doubt you'd be a wow in the bank—none of our boys would get any work done if you were there!—what would we do if you closed down on your cute little Japanese room, Loranda? Where would I drop in for a cup of tea? Be merciful!"

The incident passed. But Judith knew—and several people at the table knew—that Loranda was but biding her time to "have it out" with Judith.

Today's story concerning the activities of the Sun-Telegraph - Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club appears on another page.

Synopsis

Barry Deane, bank executive, loves Judith Brian, pretty secretary. Wealthy Loranda Tewson is jealous of Judith. Although Barry makes no secret of his interest in Judith, he cannot antagonize Loranda for business reasons, as she is the friend of his employer's daughter, Betty. On a week-end party at Betty's Canadian lodge, Loranda exercises all her wiles to keep Barry away from Judith. One of the guests couples Barry and Loranda in a toast. To hide her hurt, Judith encourages the attentions of Jack Ordway, playboy friend of Loranda. Barry disapproves and goes trekking with Loranda. Next day, Barry and Judith steal away by themselves.

The Baer Tax Bill Covers All

Glad to see that Congress has finally recognized the possibilities of the Baer tax bill and ignored them.

Many years ago we were the first to suggest a high import duty on powdered nutmeg on milk shakes.

We don't know why they put the stuff on there in the second place. We don't mind digging through sand to get water. But why put a layer of sawdust on a soft drink?

While trying to control the Mississippi by legislation we don't see how we are going to prevent floods if the farmers insist on spending August praying for rain.

That is a lack of co-operation. The conflicting taxes are also very, very bad. A man buys a cigar that is taxed by the federal government, lights it with a match taxed by the state and is fined $5 by the city for expectorating on the sidewalk.

That's three separate taxes on the same article. We aim to consolidate those stray assessments and charge him $10 for starting a forest fire so close to his chin.

The Baer tax bill figures to reduce the costs of local government by reducing the hips on the budget. That idea strikes the nail right on the thumb. There will be no more foreclosures on homes or farms. The banker must surrender his interest and also send you a cake on your birthday.

The Baer tax bill takes no stand on the bonus because the author of the bill was a soldier himself. He was so glad to get out of the Army that he ain't ever collected his $60 discharge money. We scrammed when the whistle blew.

But we're letting those fellows down in Washington know that those $60 are still there. We will let 'em lay until the next war and collect two-for-one.

What we require right now is efficiency in the national plumbing. More hot water and fewer pipes.

The Baer tax bill will attend to all that. If it fails to pass the Senate and is tabled in the House it will be a victory for our side. For then, it will never be vetoed by the President.

Treasury's Guidance In Bank Crisis Brings Spread Of Confidence

Distinct progress in the clarification of the banking situation is reflected in Secretary of the Treasury Woodin's announcement yesterday of various relaxations of the stringent and all-embracing stoppage with which the banking holiday was ushered in.

In the first place free access to safe deposit boxes was assured, and all banking institutions are permitted to make change. Furthermore, any banking institution may create special trust accounts for the receipt of new deposits which will be subject to withdrawal on demand without any restriction or limitation.

In the meantime the conferences continue between Treasury officials and representatives of leading banks, with reference to the terms and underlying security of the clearing house certificates or other form of scrip which will soon be in readiness for issue by the banks of the country.

It is evidently the intention that these certificates shall have the support of unmistakable values and possess a degree of uniformity that will make them adequate to serve the commerce not only of a particular locality, but of the country at large.

Questions of legal nicety and operating smoothness are presented which must be thought out correctly. The four-day period of the banking holiday provides no more time than the complexity of the problem clearly requires.

The restriction against gold payments, except under Treasury regulation, continues. This is as it should be. We are not off the gold standard, but on it, and more securely on it, by reason of the regulations designed to safeguard our gold reserve against voluntary and suicidal dispersal.

Already the effect of the Treasury announcement is seen in a resumption of familiar business activities and the continued revival and spread of public confidence. Perhaps this is the most encouraging sign at the moment.

With confidence re-established—and it is well on the way to re-establishment—at least half our troubles are automatically solved.

Too much praise cannot be accorded our people for the way they have met the crisis and for the poise and self-command with which they have accepted its enforced hardships and countless dislocations in their daily lives and habits.

Someone has said, the question is not so much where you are in your journey as what direction you are going in, adding that it is better to be at the bottom of the hill going up, than at the top, coming down.

The American people are bound upwards.
MAKE NO MISTAKE ABOUT THAT!

New Administration Urged to Revise The Anti-Trust Laws

The test of the capacity of a democracy lies in its alertness in re-fashioning institutions and laws to meet changing needs.

It must be borne in mind that the progressivism of 1890 may prove reactionary doctrine in 1933.

The new administration can be made of immense historical importance by inaugurating a plan of modernization of the anti-trust laws along lines which would permit effective industrial planning and economic co-ordination in the public interest.

Since 1890, a large portion of the nation's business has gravitated to large corporations.

The present problem is no longer simply preventing monopoly, but consists of the more subtle need of getting our business institutions, which have temporarily stagnated, to function efficiently again.

Paralysis in business spells unemployment for millions of persons and lack of revenue for the government.

The present need is to encourage legitimate business, operating under the surveillance of government, to explore opportunities to eliminate costly economic waste through socially conscious business co-operation.

The existing laws which make sensible business planning and co-operation of questionable legality should be modified.

Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, has suggested leaving the Sherman Act and the Clayton Act on the statute books, yet giving the Federal Trade Commission the authority to approve any business contracts which it, subject to court review, finds to be in the public interest.

The real criterion should be what is in the public interest, rather than technical and outmoded doctrines about restraint of trade.

The goal should be to make certain that the fruits of greater co-operation among competitors in industry and commerce be shared with consumers in price adjustments and with labor.

Organized labor should encourage the revision of the anti-trust laws in order that the prosperity of employers, on which employment for workers depends, may be rehabilitated.

Economists recognize that full employment of labor at high wages depends on establishing economic balance.

To achieve such a desirable equilibrium, the government must aid by substituting modern, flexible rules for the existing archaic and inflexible regulations.

A Crisis Well Handled

Banks, Business Enterprises, and the People of Pittsburgh Acquit Themselves Creditably

Now that the worst is apparently over in the banking crisis, it remains to compliment the banks of Pittsburgh, the city's commercial organizations, and the people on the creditable manner in which they have been, and are, acquitting themselves.

The shock of the moratorium, coming after three years of economic distress, might well have been expected to lead to hysterical manifestations.

The calmness with which Pittsburgh accepted the situation undoubtedly is due to confidence in the stability of Pittsburgh banks and the ability and integrity of Pittsburgh bankers.

We take off our hats to Pittsburgh's banks in tribute to the capable and courageous manner in which they have faced the crisis.

Looking Forward, Not Back

Rough and hard has been the climbing,
Steep and difficult the ascent,
Long and wearisome the struggle

From the shadows toward the sunlight
Looking forward, never backward,

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

An Unforgotten Setting

It was so long ago. I am not sure
Of being the same self I was that day;
How strange such evanescence should endure!
For still I see the wind-tossed cloud and spray,
And still I hear the rustle of the palms
That sentinelled that low and level land.
The swift air breathes, as then, its soothing balms
And golden sunlight lies on golden sands.

To being the same self I cannot swear,
Or, rather, I can swear that I am not;
But I still feel those gusts of salt-sweet air
Blow fresh and cool from Neptune's loveliest grot.
How strange! Though I forget the day, the year,
The moment's mood, the very words we said,
The mists of time have left this setting clear

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 8.—The Twentieth Century, thundering into Grand Central every morning, is the town's last royal touch in the depression. The big station becomes taut as thick carpets are rolled from the impressive gates of the marble rotunda to the train steps.

Somehow, Pullmans seem bathed in the sweat of a long run and speak of those sturdy middlewest towns—Toledo, Cleveland and Fort Wayne. I always think, too, of the new-born rabbits on the edge of the woods that gaze at the monster and show frisky white tails in frightened scamper.

Many lonely crossing guards have watched the Century out of sight and returned to tiny sanctuaries to dream of the far away places which they never would see. I always have thought it a great pity, the great express trains cannot bring their snorting engines, with flaring stacks, all the way in.

But they must be discarded at Harmon for snubby electric contraptions—smokeless, to be sure, but entirely without glamor. Save a liner, inching out to sea, nothing is so thrilling as those huge driving wheels, moist with green oil; the bright pistons and enormous side rods, silvered, and hissing with effort.

The bustle of Grand Central, and that at the equally massive Pennsylvania, is the most delightful of all confusions. For a quarter, one may become royalty for the moment. Those fawn-tinted minions, "Red Caps," know no class. Every arrival is an object of salaams. London, more than New York, feels the romance of its trains. There is "Sir Percivale," that entrancing night boat train, that roars up through Kent, from the continent, its wheels singing: "To England, to England, I'm bringing you home!"

Floyd Gibbons and I dined, the other evening, in a clattery, blinds-up restaurant on Third avenue. The lone waitress was a sour, straggly girl, seemingly weaned on disillusion, who, dropping the dishes at your side, retired to a corner to snatch fragments from a paper-backed novel. Her attitude was particularly testy toward a palsied old gentleman at our table. I remarked, when he departed, that she didn't seem to like him. "I should say not," she sniffed. "Not only doesn't tip, but I have to crumble bread for his soup."

We also wondered into one of those open-fronted shooting galleries and penny peep shows in the neighborhood. There were no other customers and the lanky attendant was obviously thrilled by a celebrity such as Gibbons floating suddenly into his place. Asking for and receiving his autograph, he said with earnest simplicity: "The folks down in Texas won't believe it."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Sick of it all?

Tired of doing the same old chores—tackling the same old worries—facing the same old heartaches?

Wish you could duck the whole thing—do a fade out—go somewhere?

Go where?

Oh, you don't care! Anywhere, s'long as you get away from everything. That how you feel?

Probably. Many of us do, particularly these days. Not just because we're having hard times, either. But everything's so upside down!

So then, what?

What should you believe?

You don't know.

Where are you heading?

You don't know that, either.

You doubt it.

Then why go on?

BECAUSE YOU CAN'T IN HONOR QUIT!

"But my life's my own!" you say. "I've paid my own way, always. I don't owe anyone anything, and even if I did, I've a right to go if I want."

No, you haven't!

Your life ISN'T your own.

YOUR LIFE IS A GIFT WHICH WAS BOUGHT FOR YOU AT A GREAT PRICE.

Millions of people whom you never saw, who never saw you, bought your life for you, gave it to you as a gift.

Tired men, weary women, frightened, bewildered heartsick people who found life tough going—they bought life for you. They made it possible for you to live.

They didn't know what it was all about, either. They, too, wanted to quit. But something in them wouldn't let them quit.

Some vague realization of the struggles and sacrifices of those who had gone before—some muddled dream of their obligation to those who were to come after—wouldn't let them quit; drove them on.

And so they stuck!

Held on, though their brains were reeling and their hearts were breaking.

And with their sweat and tears, their battles and prayers, THEY BOUGHT YOUR LIFE FOR YOU!

And now you want to quit!

But how can you?

Across the years they're watching—those millions who have handed their job on to you. See them?

And your father. How hard he fought to give you your chance!

They gave you that life you want to throw away. They built that world you want to quit.

THEY THOUGHT YOU'D CARRY ON!

And there are others watching you, with eyes which yet have never known pain—the eyes of those who'll live when you are gone.

WHAT SORT OF A WORLD WILL YOU LEAVE FOR THEM?

A world made better by YOUR sweat and tears?

A faith kept shining by YOUR battles and YOUR prayers?

Government Changes! Mr. Hoover Passes

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

American institutions in their functioning are again vindicated when, peaceably and in good nature, the government passes from the control of one political party to another. The orderly processes of a democracy operating under constitutional restrictions seem, to some of us, infinitely happier than the methods of violence which usually usher in dictatorships depending on the sword.

From the formation of the government down to the present time the republic has been endangered only twice in the transfer of power.

The first time came early in our history, when the Federalists, after 12 years of domination, were overthrown by the Democracy under the leadership of Jefferson.

The trouble that year was due, in large measure, to the fact that the Jeffersonians had been drilled too meticulously to party regularity. Under the original provision of the Constitution each voted for two men, with the understanding that the one receiving a majority should be the President and his closest competitor should have second place. The result was not so good in 1796 because it meant a divided government, Adams, the Federalist, being chosen President and Jefferson, the Democrat, Vice President.

Conspiracy Was Defeated

In the next four years the Jeffersonians intensively organized and drilled strict party regularity into their members. As the campaign approached, a Democratic congressional caucus nominated Jefferson for President and Aaron Burr for Vice President. Had precedent been followed there would have been a scattering of the votes on the Vice Presidency, with Burr in the lead.

But the Democrats followed the caucus and voted for both men, resulting in a tie, which threw the election into the House. Thereupon the Federalists, of the lame duck Congress, who hated Jefferson, entered into a conspiracy to elect Burr. Had this conspiracy succeeded it would have meant the instant disruption of the Union. It might have succeedd but for the patriotism of Alexander Hamilton, who bitterly protested against the proposed betrayal and influenced enough Federalists to prevent its consummation.

Two Instances of Trouble In Transfer of Power

The only other time, if we except 1860, when war long in preparation was unavoidable, when the peace of the nation was threatened in the transfer of power, was in 1876. Samuel J. Tilden, a great statesman and pure patriot, had a clear majority of the popular vote and of the electoral college.

We were still living under the shadow of the sword with corruption rampant, and the conspiracy was launched to change the electoral vote as declared by counting in enough defeated electors in three states to defeat Tilden. We need not go into the long story here. It was shameful enough. Roscoe Conkling asked one of Tilden's friends if they intended to stand for the outrage. Offers of volunteer soldiers poured in on Tilden. He had at that time merely said one thing:

"I have been elected and shall at the proper time take the oath of office"—

There is every reason to believe that the conspirators would have abandoned their project.

But Tilden was a man of peace and he wanted no internecine strife. He agreed to a legal device for the settlement, admitting thus that there was a question as to his election, and from that moment he was defeated.

These are the only two instances in our history where there has been the slightest trouble in the transfer of power.

President Hoover has accepted the verdict of the people in good spirit and he will retire to private life with the best wishes of all Americans for his future happiness. He has been unfortunate in the Presidency, and I have no intent to predict here the ultimate verdict of history.

He was unfortunate in the depression.

But he was most unfortunate in that he had so long been pictured to the people as a "miracle man," capable of anything.

Nothing can be so provoking as a brilliant introduction to a dull volume, and nothing so dangerous as over-statement regarding a man's capacity.

He was unfortunate in that he came into the American people's consciousness against the background of war and when emotionalism ran riot. To popularize the relief work and the food administration it was thought necessary to make the administrator something more than human. It may be doubted whether any American, unless it be Lindbergh, has ever been converted so nearly into a veritable god as Mr. Hoover.

All this disadvantage might have worn off had the idea not been embellished by his thoughtless friends and, partly, by some utterances of his own in 1928. Bearing in mind the childish faith that printers' ink imparts to millions, his unhappy reference to the elimination of poverty was ill advised.

And when the depression came, too many millions, who had believed, turned upon him all the more fiercely.

Hoover Had Not Been Trained to Politics

Aside from his policies, which I do not intend to discuss now, I think there is another explanation of his failure to hold the people. He was essentially a business man—the first real business man in the presidency. His training and temperament were those of a man of business enterprises. He had not been trained to statesmanship or politics. He was unhappy in dealing with men. He failed notably in his dealings with the members of Congress. He lacked the finesse of a Jefferson, who had the art of insinuating his wishes into the mind of the listener, and he lacked the dynamic power of a Jackson or Theodore Roosevelt to force acquiescence to his views.

This hurt him in the practical work of statesmanship.

And then, somehow, he lacked the knack of winning the press; due again, I think, to his lack of political training. He rubbed too many of the Washington correspondents the wrong way. This began as early as the campaign of 1928.

Assured a Place In History

But all this is now water over the dam. It may be assumed that he did what he thought was proper. He has been attacked, sometimes savagely, but no more so than many others in public life. Certainly no more than Wilson; not nearly so much as Jackson. Most of the attacks, however, were aimed at his policies. It was not aimed so much at the individual. Some bitter personal attacks were written against him, and no doubt there was some scurrility in these, but scurrility did not spare Wilson, and personal attacks on public men seldom stick.

Thus, as plain Herbert Hoover he carries into private life the best wishes of the people. He has been very fortunate, after all. To have been a stranger to the American public in 1917 and to have been strongly urged for the Presidency three years later is absolutely without precedent in history. After all, his career reads like a story from a fairy book. His will make a biography of adventure such as could be written about few public men in any country. He has tasted the sweets of unreasoning adulation and the bitterness of denunciation. His life has been crowded; his tale is written; and he has an assured place in history. Now he can rest and enjoy the memories of the great moments he has known.

Isn't It So?

Most of the money a woman spends for improvements on herself, you will notice, goes for outside jobs.
